Movie Poster Size Sleeves & Boards

Avoid protective sleeves made of polyethylene, polypropylene and polyvinyl chloride (PVC). Most of these plastics are coated with chemicals and contain additives that migrate into paper and cause premature aging. Even uncoated polypropylene emits gases that seep into paper. The only material which can actually preserve paper is uncoated, archival quality polyester film such as Mylar® D or Melinex® 516. BCE's Movie Gards™ are made entirely from Mylar® D. This exceptionally strong transparent film will resist moisture, pollutants, oils and acids, and has a life expectancy of hundreds of years.

Editorial

By Maggie Thompson

As we looked for entertaining topics, we found ourselves lumping a bunch of odd items — the great Another Rainbow and Russ Cochran hardcover reprint series, limited-edition lithographs, terrific statues — in the same category. We realized we'd come up with another topic: high-end collectibles.

One of the keen things about comics collectibles is that even what we think of as high-end don't have to be budget-busting, especially when they're bought when they're initially released.

As I mentioned to a reporter yesterday (who was looking for recommendations for parents buying comics for kids), the Barks Library books only came to about $20 per lavish hardcover. That's far cheaper per page or per story than almost any other kids' book you can find today. Yet in our field, that material is often called "high-end."

But purchasers who spend $3 per month to buy a chapter of a continued story can usually budget for a single item that touches their affections. Our cover and interior set-up shots accommodated the mergings of such items from several collections.

Included were such trifles as the Bowen Dark Knight and Death statues, the Moore Frazetta Princess statue, the Wolverine desk set, the Hulk necklace (remember when those were offered in the pages of Marvel Comics? Less than $20, weren't they?), several collector rings, a keychain celebrating the upcoming James Cameron Spider-Man film, a hardcover Simpsons release along with several signed and numbered limited-edition books, and a trading-card and gaming-card set. (Oh, and did you notice the Peanuts original in the background?)

Original prices for these items range from hundreds of dollars — to free. There are, in other words, countless types of high-end delights in our field — something for darned near everyone. What's your favorite high-end comics possession?

Sometimes, the best in life are free.

Wizards of the Coast is awarded patent for 'trading card method of play'

By Joyce Greenholdt

The United States Patent Office has granted a utility patent on "Trading-card game method of play" for Wizards of the Coast's Magic: The Gathering.

Awrded Sept. 2, the patent is registered to inventor Richard Garfield and assigned to Wizards of the Coast.

A patent grant allows an inventor to prohibit others from making, using, or selling his invention for a term of 17 years, which may be extended only by a special act of congress.

The application for the patent was officially filed Oct. 17, 1995, based on a pending application filed June 22, 1994.

The abstract for Wizard's of the Coast's Patent Number 5,662,332, "Trading Card Game Method of Play" states, in part, "In this game of strategy and chance, players construct their own library of cards, preferably from trading cards, and play their library or deck of cards against the deck of cards of an opposing player."

Steve Kam of Wizards of the Coast's public-relations department said, "Currently we're working with our legal department to further discuss the patent issue. When further details become available, we'll be better able to answer questions on this subject."

Stuart R. Kaplan, CEO of U.S. Games Systems and manufacturer of Wyvern, another early trading-card game, said he didn't know how the patent would affect other trading-card game manufacturers. "I've been waiting to see exactly what the patent says," he told CBG. "I'm not really concerned, because our game play is different from Magic. I think very positively of Wizards of the Coast and Magic. I give a lot of credit to Garfield and Adkison; I think they've set a standard for other people to follow."

Kaplan added that, while games that were more similar to Magic might be affected, he hoped that trading-card games in general would not become too restricted. "I think having a lot of good, creative games in this genre will make it stronger, get more people paying attention to it."

Christian Moore talks about the horror story that scared the entire comics industry

By Michael Dean

Seething from a break-up with his girlfriend, Christian Moore took 20 minutes to write a bitter, violent story called "A Taste of Cherry" that was published in Verotika #4 in 1995. Two years later, repercussions are still being felt in the comics industry.

Responding to a complaint from watchdog group Oklahomans for Children and Families, Oklahoma City undercover police purchased a copy of Verotika #4, then raided the Planet Comics store and confiscated several bags full of comic books.

Store owners John Hunter and Michael Kennedy were indicted on obscenity charges related to eight titles, including Verotika #4, but, as the district attorney's office reviewed the titles, charges were dropped against all but one: Only Verotika #4 survived all of the district attorney's tests for obscenity under Oklahoma law.

At the end of August 1997, Hunter and Kennedy agreed to plead guilty to charges of trafficking in obscenity in exchange for a deferred prison sentence and a $1500 fine. Planet Comics had closed its doors permanently, and both defendants had been forced out of the comics business. Their decision to plead guilty was a discouraging outcome for the Comic Book Legal Defense Fund, which had supported the store's legal fight.

Surveying the carnage left in the aftermath of "A Taste of Cherry," does its author have any regrets?

"My only regret is that we live in the sort of country where this sort of thing can happen," Moore told CBG. "I feel badly for what happened to these comics store owners, but, if things like Verotika offend you, don't buy them. It was a vile story. It wasn't designed to be anything but that. The story accomplished what it set out to do."

"A Taste of Cherry" concerns the kidnapping, raping, and torturing of a teenage girl. At the story's end, it is revealed that the girl's own father hired the attackers in order to watch their abuse on videotape. OCAF Office Manager Ginger Neighbors told CBG the story so horrified her that she cried.

Moore said, "I was involved with a girl who up and dumped me and I wrote the story in the space of 20 minutes as a way to vent." Moore originally wrote the story in 1992 in the form of a screenplay, which he showed to Hart Fisher. Fisher later became involved with Glenn Danzig's Verotik Comics, and Moore said he received a call one day from Danzig, asking to see a copy of the script. The story became Moore's first published work as a comics writer.

Today, the 26-year-old Moore describes himself as a PTA parent and father of four. Asked how he would feel about his children reading a comic book like Verotika #4, he said, "I don't think it's appropriate for kids to read that stuff. I wouldn't let them read my stuff. I think it would make them uncomfortable to know that I was thinking about things like that."

Nevertheless, as Moore continued to negotiate for publication of his first comics work since Verotika #4, the unrepentant writer said, "I'm not planning on censoring myself at all." In fact, he said, "They ain't seen nothing yet. That story doesn't even come close to as bad as I can get."

Has the Planet Comics case left publishers hesitant to use his work? "[Verotik Managing Editor] Steven Wardlaw told me Verotik was kind of reticent about drawing that kind of negative attention again."

For the most part, however, Moore said he believes his notoriety has helped him get attention from publishers. He also hastened to add, "Not everything I write is like this one story."

Moore said he has been working on more long-form stories with more complex plots. Negotiations are nearly completed, he said, for publication of a four-part mini-series called Mr. Shambles. He described the title, which he said should be released around the first of the year, as "a dark tale of a man caught between life and death." Also in the works is a four-issue mini-series called The Homunculus. "I would like to explore doing a monthly horror series," he said.

Don't expect to see any light-hearted comics from Moore, however. "I do not write hero comics," he said. "I wouldn't know where to begin."

Stathis scholarship auction raises $14,000

The Sept. 6 charity auction held at the Four Color Images gallery in New York City to benefit the Lou Stathis Memorial Scholarship Fund at the School of Visual Arts was a success, according to all reports. The art donated by many of the industry's top talent raised more than $14,000 for the fund.

Donations can still be sent to the attention of Shelly Roeberg at DC Comics, 1700 Broadway, New York, NY 10019. Checks can be made out to Visual Arts Foundation, with the memo line specifying the Lou Stathis Memorial Scholarship Fund.

Hardcover edition collects 'The Sandman' dust covers

It is rare that a long-running series has a single cover artist. In the seven-year run of The Sandman, Dave McKean's art graced every issue's cover, as well as the covers of the hardcover and trade paperback collections and galleries.

Designed by McKean, The Sandman Dust Covers — The Collected Sandman Covers 1989-1996 is a 208-page album-size (7 3/4x10 3/4˝) hardcover, re-presenting all 75 covers from the award-winning Vertigo series. It is scheduled to ship Nov. 12.

The book also features commentary by both McKean and Sandman author Neil Gaiman that provides insights and background into how the covers — mixtures of painting, photography, sculpture, and computer/photo manipulation — were planned and created and how each cover relates to the story it accompanies. Each cover is presented without logos or type elements except for those cases in which they were an integral part of the design. McKean has also executed a new cover for the volume.

The book also features a new eight-page fictional memoir by Gaiman, illustrated by McKean, in which the author reflects on the mysterious role that The Sandman has played in his life

Accompanying the release of the dust covers collection is a Sandman poster by McKean, featuring a new portrayal of the Lord of Dreams, also scheduled for release Nov. 12.

In addition, all 75 issues of The Sandman are available, in collected form, in 10 trade-paperback editions — The Sandman: A Game of You, The Sandman: Brief Lives, The Sandman: Doll's House, The Sandman: Dream Country, The Sandman: Fables and Reflections, The Sandman: Preludes and Nocturnes, The Sandman: Season of Mists, The Sandman: The Kindly Ones, The Sandman: The Wake, and The Sandman: World's End — and also are being reprinted issue by issue, in color, in the monthly Essential Vertigo: The Sandman series. DC recommends both the trade paperbacks and the individual issues for mature readers.

Dynamic Forces to market signed, numbered Marvel comics

Dynamic Forces has reached an agreement with Marvel Comics to produce, package, and market a line of exclusive signed and numbered comics which will be sold through the direct market.

The program is slated to begin with November-shipping titles. Among the products scheduled to be offered are: Fantastic Four #1 signed by Scott Lobdell; Captain America #1 signed by Mark Waid and Ron Garney; and Kingpin signed by Stan Lee and John Romita Sr.

Dynamic Forces President Nick Barrucci said, "We are very excited about the possibilities of working with an industry powerhouse like Marvel Comics. The possibilities are endless, and the timing couldn't be better, with the Marvel Heroes Return event starting in November."

Marvel Comics Vice President of Direct Sales Matt Ragone said, "Dynamic holds a long-standing reputation for producing creative collectibles in the direct market. Retailers can now stock Marvel autographed comics with the confidence and security of certified authenticity."

Death Dealer statue returns in new edition

Sculptor Randy Bowen's bronze interpretation of Frank Frazetta's famous Death Dealer figure sold out its limited edition of 50 when it was released in 1994 and has become a sought-after item in the high-end collectibles market.

Now, Bowen Designs, in collaboration with Dark Horse Comics, has been licensed by the Frazettas to produce a cold-cast version of the statue in a limited edition of 5000. This version varies slightly from the original: It is painted and stands 13½˝ atop a dark mahogany base laced with burnished steel chains.

The new Death Dealer is scheduled for December release and is priced at $250.

Frazetta's painting of an ominous armored warrior astride a horse has appeared on book covers and posters and has inspired a series of novels and a series of comic books. The figure was even adopted as a mascot by the U.S. Army Tank Corp.

Send clippings, with your name, the source, and date of publication on each item, to Michael Dean, Clipping Service, 700 E. State St., Iola, WI 54990.

After dwelling on negativity in recent weeks, this issue's Clipping Service is happily upbeat:

Longtime Hulk artist Herb Trimpe pulled off a feat this summer that would have given the green-skinned goliath pause. At the age of 58, he graduated from Empire State College with a BA in art. His graduation was reported in an Op Ed piece in the July 26 Middletown, N.Y., Times Herald Record written by his proud wife Linda Fite.

Fite described the special ceremony as "the most amazing graduation I have ever witnessed ... These were grown-ups, folks who had wanted to go to school, not youngsters who did it because it was expected or to get out of taking a 9-to-5 job. These people had worked hard, some of them for years, to finish what they set out to do, to achieve their goals with the help of Empire State College mentors, families and friends."

The oldest graduate that day was about 70, said Fite. One woman had lost her eyesight while enrolled at the school but had persevered to get her degree. When Trimpe's turn came, he read a poem he had written comparing himself to the Scarecrow from The Wizard of Oz, who needed a diploma to authenticate his brainpower. ("His confidence down, with nowhere to roost / He needed the paper to give him a boost.")

Trimpe's only previous experience with higher education was a three-year enrollment at the School of Visual Arts. He plans to return to school next fall to start on a master's degree from SUNY New Paltz.

"He says that 40 years ago he would never have believed this would be happening," wrote Fite.

Florida State University Professor Carolyn Piazza defended comic books as an enhancement rather than a detriment to literacy in her column The Right to Read in the July 30 Tallahassee (Fla.) Democrat.

A reader asked, "As a parent, should I be concerned that the only thing my 12-year-old wants to read are comic books?"

Piazza replied: "Most educators would probably agree that a steady diet of comic books might be limiting, but not without merit. After all, comic books are a kind of childhood lore that opens up worlds filled with robots and vampires, superheroes and warriors, or aliens and space creatures. For many children, comic books are the single most important entry to reading."

Piazza recommended parents explore comic books with their kids and find links to other kinds of literature. Archie readers, she suggested, might like joke books.

"Comic books are part of children's fantasy life and sense of wonder," she said. "Use them as a starting point to stretch your child's reading world."

Thanks to contributors Mark Seganish and Joe Staton for some of this week's clippings.

In the October Spin*, a color, four-page comics "Strip Mall" feature was blurbed, "Seeking answers to why a once vibrant biz is in such turmoil, two comics veterans voyage to San Diego for Comi-Con '97, the Geek Nation's answer to Lollapalooza."*

The piece was drawn by comics pro Kyle Baker and written by Baker and Larry Doyle*, who really did interview* Maggie Thompson at the San Diego convention this summer. The special guest star, herself, confirms that she was quoted correctly.

Jon "Bean" Hastings

As always, it's good to see my name in the pages of CBG, but this latest time came as a delightful surprise. I'm thumbing through #1239 when I get to the calendar notes section and, lo and behold, there's my name blazing away right under "born on this date," "Jon 'Bean' Hastings," big as life.

I have no idea how you found that out (I'm assuming that it's all part of the crack journalism that you always comes shining through) so that made it an extra special treat.

Thanks for making the big three-oh a real treat.

[By the way, industry folks, it makes things easier on our crack journalism team when people let us know such details as their names, addresses, phone numbers — and birthdays. It lets us forward mail, put you on our week-at-a-glance calendar, and call you when you least expect it.]

I just wanted to say thanks to CBG. I just read issue #1243 and was pleased to find an article about Sovereign 7. To me this is one of the best comic books on the market right now. It is in my Top Five, along with Astro City, Aquaman, Starman, and The Incredible Hulk. I don't think that this title has received the attention that it deserves. How about an interview with Chris Claremont?

Thanks for the recent coverage on DC's Tangent titles. I wonder what this means for mainstream super-hero, titles, however. It seems that the most innovative storytelling occurs under the umbrella of apocryphal lines like Elseworlds, Amalgam, and Tangent.

And that Joker? Sure looks like the Creeper to me.

[I've been getting the same impression: that out-of-continuity stories are the most innovative. It doesn't have to be that way. Some of the best current examples of inventive continuity plotting today can be found in Denny O'Neil's Batman universe, for example. The concept of exciting or moving or simply well-told stories with beginning, middle, and end is alive in a number of stories, some of them featuring Batman only (forgive the expression) tangentially.

However, I think excellent story construction can flourish most readily when the reader doesn't know what to expect — when, in other words, a character can die or change fundamentally. And when the writer, therefore, can work unfettered by the fact that the same characters who attracted the audience have to keep as many of those attractive elements as possible by next year. And, of course, the reader doesn't have to do homework to jump aboard the one-shots.]

I enjoyed reading Elizabeth Kowols' letter about the Chicago con. She had lots of fun things to say about Pat Tallman, who portrays Lyta Alexander on Babylon 5.

Pat is really great in person and on paper, and I urge all of her fans to join her fan club. I am a new member and am very impressed with the items that her club, compared to others, has to offer, particularly Pat's self-written items that appear in Aspire, which is the club's newsletter. The newsletter is filled with stories and pictures that would not otherwise be available in a standard fanzine.

I am not aware of many other fan clubs that give the fans so much intimate access to a celebrity. Clearly, Pat Tallman loves her fans and loves to communicate with them. Those of you who are interested can write the fan

Here's was I'd like to see in CBG: A comprehensive guide to what I call "encyclopedia comics." These are comics which are reference materials for readers of other comics. The two most famous examples are the Official Handbook of the Marvel Universe and Who's Who in the DC Universe. I find it fascinating that comics companies have created fictional realms that are so vast that one needs a reference book to keep track of them all. Thanks for listening and keep up the excellent work.

[Let me recommend again The Slings & Arrows Comic Guide, reviewed last issue. There have also been some stand-alone comic books that function as references to the titles in a specific series.]

I would like to add my opinion to the discussions concerning continuity. I will approach it in a roundabout fashion, so please bear with me.

As we journey through life, we experience things, we observe, we think, and, hopefully, we learn. The aggregate of all experiences and observations of our lives becomes our own continuity. This continuity is based upon two things:

- When we experience something, it is happening in real time.
- What we see is true and factual.

We do not always see the entire picture, and sometimes our perceptions are influenced by previous experiences and observations. In other words, we can accept a bit of latitude as to what might be the whole truth.

The point often missed by many comic-book professionals (and other entertainment-media professionals) is that the events depicted in fictional material are presented to us with the same premise as that of our real lives. We are asked to suspend our disbelief and accept that these stories are happening in real time and that what we are witnessing is true and factual (in the context of the fictional universe).

This premise is exactly the reason that comic books, Star Trek, Tolkien's Ring trilogy, Asimov's Foundation, and many other fictional universes have such a large base of fans. By likening the fictional universes to our real lives, the authors allow us to bond, to identify, and to feel that we are a part of these universes because we have "witnessed" their history — their continuity.

Of course, we understand that these fictional universes must change and evolve over time. In fact, we applaud such changes — as long as they can be rationalized. But, when an author simply disregards continuity, the bond is broken. Once the bond is broken, we tend to lose much of our interest in the continuing saga of these universes. After all, what reason is there for us to care about the denizens of a universe that may be unrecognizable from one month to the next? We are perfectly capable of accepting a single story on its own merit, but, in doing so, our focus becomes more finite — more fractured. (There's that word again, Maggie.)

What seems to work is this: Tell us a good story. Build on the past. Tell us hitherto-untold tales. Show us things from a different perspective. Change the characters and the universes over time. Enhance the mythology of these universes. But do not violate what has gone before.

This is the philosophy of John Byrne and crew when dealing with Jack Kirby's Fourth World. I think it is exactly correct.

I think fans understand that continuity is a difficult thing to manage. I also think that fans are wildly appreciative of creators who can implement change and evolution without violating fictional history.

I think we also understand why some creators would rather not deal with it. Fine. By all means, create your own universes and tell your own stories. We may come to love your creations as much as, or even more than, those that already exist.

That is, as long as you don't violate your own continuity.

I just got done reading Peter David's column and I felt compelled to write. In it, he writes about how, as a writer, what he does is so insignificant in the grand scheme of things, he doesn't understand why people make such a big deal about it.

I am fully aware that this is going to come across as a case of hero worship. See, Peter David is my favorite writer, period. I guess I always wanted to be a writer, but it was Peter who not only got me interested in writing, but also in reading again. As a writer myself, nothing is sold yet, but I know I'm getting closer. But I know that I would not be as far along as I am now or enjoying books of all kinds again, if it weren't for my exposure to the book Strike Zone all those years ago.

The above may seem like rambling, but it does tie into my central point, that a good writer is just as important as a good doctor — to use Peter's analogy. The doctor heals the body; this is true. But a good writer heals the soul. A good writer makes you take a different look or gain a different understanding of the world around you. A good writer can inspire, challenge, or even just make a person feel better with laughter.

This is not an easy thing to do. Not everyone can do it, and even fewer can after they turn in their work. Movies are a prime example of this. Hollywood churns out assembly-line films with gratuitous nudity and pointless violence by the truckload, producing situations in the way shown by the movie The Player. What winds up on the screen — after the actors are chosen and their expectations are met, the director's applied his or her vision, and the test audiences have their say — can be completely removed from what had been written.

Films like Shine and Sling Blade left me with a feeling of awe as I left the theater, not unlike the feeling I got when I read The Tale of One Bad Rat, Sandman, or Peter David's story about Crazy Eights from the pages of The Incredible Hulk. A good writer fortifies people to face and understand. As Shakespeare did, they capture what it's like to be alive and let it affect the readers as it will.

This isn't to say that doctors are worthless — just that, in the grand scheme of things, it takes more than physical health to survive. It also takes mental and spiritual health. A good writer is another weaver of the tapestry of life.

Barry Dutter

I just read Peter David's column on the Spawn movie, and I pretty much agreed with everything he said. Unlike Peter, I have read every issue of Spawn, so I can safely say that Spawn is one of the most faithful translations of a comic-book character to the silver screen ever done. Spawn ranks alongside The Crow as far as comic-book movies that are most respectful of their source material. Unfortunately, in the case of Spawn, the comic book being adapted isn't a particularly good one.

I know Todd McFarlane has dreams of Spawn becoming a household name someday, but that is never going to happen, for one very obvious reason. Spawn's powers are derived from Satan, and, even though Spawn is a hero, that still doesn't erase the fact that his powers originate from Hell. There is a large segment of the country that will never accept a hero with these origins.

True, Superman may be an alien, but at least he doesn't come from Hell! The box-office figures for Spawn attest to this. As of late August, Spawn has taken in $50 million — about the same amount made by The Crow. The final U.S. box office for Spawn will probably be about $55 million. This is about as well as can be expected for this type of film. Based on this figure, I would not expect to see a Spawn 2. The Spawn movie is as good as it can possibly be — it's just not good enough.

I am ready to stop reading the Spawn comic book at this point. I find the series too dark and depressing for my tastes. When I read the first issue, my reaction was, "This guy has the same origin as Ghost Rider (1972 version)": a basically nice guy who makes a pact with the devil, gets super-powers, and only the love of a good woman can redeem him.

The problem I have always had with Spawn is that he never has the guts to tell his wife that he has come back from the dead. Instead, he sulks in an alley and hangs out with the homeless.

Having a homeless super-hero with Hellspawned powers may be what is considered alternative or cutting-edge these days, but the comic book has never clicked with me. I've always bought it just for the art, and with McFarlane too busy selling toys to pencil his own comic book, there's not much reason to buy it any more.

I kept hoping some of the subplots in the comic book might be resolved, but it doesn't look like that's ever going to happen.

As a kid, I used to love the Ghost Rider comic book, because GR had the nerve to confront Satan and could resist Satan's influence as long as he had the love of his gal, Roxanne Simpson. In the Spawn comic book, Al Simmons comes back from the dead, finds that his wife has moved on with her life, and decides to go live in an alley, waiting for demons to attack him.

Spawn just doesn't seem heroic to me. The Malebolgia seems convinced that, if Spawn sticks around long enough, eventually, he will turn evil and lead Hell's army, but we are never given any indication this might happen. Al Simmons seems a poor choice to lead an army of hell. If I were the Malebolgia, I would take the Spawn power away from Simmons and give it to someone else.

The problem I have with Spawn is that it is too open-ended. Spawn can apparently never tell his wife that he has returned from the dead. Spawn can apparently never confront the Malebolgia or Jason Wynn. Spawn seems to have no intention of ever moving out of his alley and finding a better place to live. I just can't relate to a hero who sits on a throne of bones and feeds on worms! I think Spawn would work better as a supporting character in someone else's comic book, but I don't think he has enough substance to carry his own series.

The Spawn comic book has really caught on with younger readers, so maybe this just shows how out of touch I am with what today's kids are looking for. Then, again, it's possible that older fans back in 1972 would have been shocked that I was reading a comic about a motorcycle-riding Satanist.

It always bothered me that Spawn bears a slight resemblance to Spider-Man visually, and seems to possess all the same powers as a previous McFarlane co-creation, Venom. Both Venom and Spawn have symbiotic costumes that can transform into any weapon, as well as grant powers of camouflage. If Marvel makes that Venom movie now, people are going to think the character was ripped off from Spawn.

The best thing I have to say about the Spawn movie is that the special effects were pretty cool. I think Spawn's cape should win an Academy Award for Best Supporting Actor. I can't believe poor Martin Sheen's career has gone from Apocalypse Now to Project: ALF to Spawn! Forget about The Curse of Spawn — let's talk about The Curse of Sheen, which Martin seems to have passed on to his son, Charlie.

At least the Spawn movie is probably better than Steel, which came out two weeks later.

[Spawn demonstrably has enough substance to carry his own comic book with #69 solicited for December shipping, not to mention spin-offs, crossovers, and side projects. And open-endedness is a basic element for virtually any ongoing series. Will Bart Simpson or Charlie Brown ever make it to junior high? Will Donald and Daisy Duck ever get married?

Fears of what happened to such popular icons as Li'l Abner when they experienced massive changes led to endorsement of the "If it ain't broke, don't fix it" practice.

Equally obviously, different approaches to fantasy entertainment appeal to different readers.

And Spawn (if not the series) does have an eternity in which to play out his relationships.]

An open letter to DC Comics:

I was perusing the new Previews when I came across the solicitation for The Spectre #71. I was suprised to see it being solicited as pitting the Spectre against God, "and only one walks away."

Let me state right away: I have absolutely no problem with this. We are clearly in fantasy land, and (as Tony Isabella has so rightly brought up), since incarnations of evil and Satan abound in the Marvel and DC universes, shouldn't good?

More than five years ago, Rick Veitch and Michael Zulli tried to have a time-traveling Swamp Thing meet Jesus. Now-President and Editor in Chief Jenette Kahn stopped publication and Rick left Swamp Thing and DC and has not returned.

Am I missing something here?

I brought up the infamous Swamp Thing story at the Vertigo panel at the '96 San Diego comics convention and was greeted with a weary sigh by Karen Berger. She told me that there was no chance the story would ever see the light of day.

Why not? If standards have changed enough to allow the Spectre to confront and battle God, why can't DC publish Veitch and Zulli's Jesus story?

I know the incident was a public-relations

embarassment, and DC will not want to reopen the matter, but the mainstream industry is poorer for the loss of Veitch, and I am poorer for never getting to read the story

Please reconsider.

[For two barriers, the story wasn't finished at the time and was part of ongoing continuity — which was then concluded in a different direction. By the way, it's only one example of many DC stories that weren't published for one reason or another. Watch for upcoming material in CBG.]

Michael Pickens' letter in CBG #1244 about Christian book stores and their attempts to provide "wholesome" alternatives to secular pop culture was enlightening and amusing.

When I read his description of the video game featuring King David, I wondered if it also included having David send Bathsheba's husband, Uriah, into battle so that he would be killed and Bathsheba would then be available. It might, but somehow I doubt it. Quite a few characters in the Bible would fall short of the standard many of these groups set.

On a related note: I applaud the stand Tony Isabella is taking in Medina. If, lately, his column has not been the fountain of wry and sarcastic commentary we've come to expect, his travails against the would-be censors are nonetheless important and pertinent. I read his column religiously (pun intended).

Loved your recent Munsters issue and the TV comics with photo covers.

I always hoped that DC would run a photo of George Reeves on one Superman cover, maybe for Supes' 60th birthday. Wouldn't this be a great tribute? It would probably sell like hotcakes. I hope the fans write to DC and request this. (All the other Supermen have appeared on photo covers — Chris Reeve, Dean Cain, Gerard Christopher, etc.) As Captain Picard would say, "Make it so."

[Let's see — Superman's 60th birthday.

How about simultaneous release of (different) self-contained stories featuring each incarnation of the character?

Would his birthday month be February (since his official birthday is Feb. 29)? Or June (the cover date of Action #1)? At any rate, that month would have stories featuring: the Golden Age Superman; the radio Superman (looking like Bud Collyer); the Kirk Alyn Superman; the George Reeves Superman; the Weisinger Superman; the Schwartz Superman; the Christoper Reeve Superman; the Superman Adventures Superman; the Dean Cain Superman; the John Byrne Superman; and the electric Superman. There'd be photocovers where applicable.

Each has differed from the others — with different powers, associated buddies, and enemies.]

I know this was Wizard's first time running the Chicago con but I'm going to list some complaints in the hope that it can take this as constructive criticism and return the con to the greatness it had previously achieved.

First, I like to meet the pros and go to programming, but the main reason I go to this con is to find old comics. I believe that's why most people attend. Usually, there's an abundance of choices, and I have to decide what I want most, but this year the comics just weren't there — and I'm not talking about rare comics, either. My friends all agreed.

I did see a lot of tables of anime, videos, and toys, but there were fewer comics and a smaller selection of them than usual. The dealers' room is the backbone of the con, and a room full of old, obscure comics is what makes us travel hundreds of miles. I can only afford to travel to one big con in this region, but, if the selection is as dismal next year, I guess I'll try out Motor City or Mid-Ohio.

I don't know how well the show was publicized, but attendance seemed down to me. I know it was a holiday weekend, but I've been there before on the 4th and seen it packed. It was certainly the first time I could easily get down the aisles, though that may have just been because of the new location of the dealers' room. I was perfectly happy with the old setup but, once I got used to this one, I liked it. Including an index of the dealers with the room map was a long overdue idea, although usually you alphabetize by the last name. I did enjoy things at the con. I met some neat people, talked to some old friends, and was one of the three people at Tracey Heft's superb talk on comic-book conservation. For the most part, though, the programming was dismal. Usually, the highlights of the weekend are finding a deal or a great piece of art; this year they happened after the dealers' room closed. Friday night we had a great view from the hotel room of the fireworks, as they filled the horizon. On Saturday Robert Beerbohm came to the room to visit with my buddy Bart and told great stories about the old days of cons. Beerbohm is writing a book on the history of the comic-book shop, but I'd love to see his own adventures in print. My suggestion for the Chicago con is, next year, get Neal Adams as the guest of honor. It's been years since he's been the main guest at a con, and he was certainly the most important and influential artist to come along in the late '60s. I still think his X-Men are the best comics ever made. The guest of honor this year was Frank Miller, coinciding with the 10th anniversary of The Dark Knight Returns. While he has certainly accomplished a lot, that wouldn't have happened if Adams hadn't returned Batman to his roots almost 20 years earlier, and Miller has said this in interviews.

[The reason the floors seemed less crowded was the change in the hall; there were thousands more square feet, in the aisles alone.

I'm not sure what comics you were after; I spent more than all the money I'd set aside for purchasing by the middle of the first day's selling — but that was primarily at two tables, and I was after some odd items.]

I became a TV producer the only honest way — by accident.

It happened when I was called upon to do a series of TV specials with a talented producer-director named Bob Bowker. On our first two collaborations, I was listed as writer. That is, the credits said, "Produced and directed by Bob Bowker, written by Mark Evanier." Which was fine and proper.

However, I did more than sit at a typewriter. Most shows, you can't just do that because things change. Roles are cast, sets and costumes are designed, material is rehearsed. If you care at all about what you've written, you have to be involved in all phases of production, right on through the final edit, because it all affects the script.

Sometimes, you have to explain what you've written; sometimes, you have to rewrite it. The important thing is to be there, participating. The writer who hands in the pages and abandons them is often in for a rude jolt when he sees the finished show on the air. I always try to stretch my involvement as writer as far as they'll possibly allow me.

Bob and I worked well together on two specials. When I signed on for the third, I assumed we would sport the same titles, which was copacetic. Much to my surprise, the credits on this one wound up reading, "Produced by Bob Bowker and Mark Evanier, directed by Bob Bowker, written by Mark Evanier."

I never found out quite how this happened; I think it was just Bob being generous. But I do know that absolutely nothing changed about our working relationship or my duties. I did the exact same things I'd done when my name was not on the producer title card.

Several of the shows I produced with Bob were Saturday morning preview specials. These were very big in the '70s and '80s, back when ABC, CBS, and NBC were deeper into Saturday morning cartoons than they are today, and a bit freer with cash.

The networks started their new Saturday morning schedules in September. A preview special ran in prime time, usually the night before the new shows made their debuts. The concept was to have someone host a variety show or comedy of some sort and then slip in short preview clips of the new Saturday a.m. series to plug them. For several years, I found myself doing one of these every Autumn, sometimes in tandem with Bob. I did three (I think) for ABC, one for NBC, and several for CBS.

They were rough assignments, because, first of all, you had to try to do something entertaining in a context where the network cared only about the plugs. Second, since the shows had no rerun potential, no one wanted to spend any real money on them. And third, if the new Saturday morning cartoon shows are beginning on Sept. 14, it is highly unlikely that the first episodes will be completed much before, say, Sept. 13.

Animation is a long, pressurized process that often comes down to the last possible second. There have even been shows that weren't finished in time but aired anyway. For its first run, a series sometimes broadcasts an episode with mistakes in it, then goes back and fixes them for subsequent airings.

So if you're producing a special that previews these shows — well, forget about trying to get clips much in advance. The day we taped the preview special I did for NBC, the cartoons we were previewing not only weren't done, they weren't even in the country. The first episodes were scattered all over Korea, still being animated. We had to tape the show, leaving holes for the previews, then edit them in at the last minute.

That was unsatisfying; it meant that the clips had nothing to do with the show and really felt like quasi-commercials. By the time Bob and I started doing the specials for CBS, we were both committed to integrating the clips into the show in a (hopefully) entertaining way. This meant doing the show at the last possible moment, and that, of course, meant pressure by the tonweight.

The closest we cut things was on the next-to-the-last special we did, for which I'd devised an ambitious scenario of our live hosts interacting with the cartoon clips. I wanted to put our stars into the animation, which, on our budget of cash and time, was like trying to build a lifesize replica of the Sphinx out of Lego blocks in under an hour. Bob listened to what I envisioned, realized it was utterly impossible, and said, "OK, let's try it." (For him, since he knew the problems, it was an act of courage; for me, it was blind stupidity.)

The show was set to air at 8 p.m. on Friday evening. This meant that we had to feed the show to New York via satellite some time earlier that day, so it could be transmitted to the vast CBS affiliate network at the proper hour. Problem: The CBS Sports division had the satellite booked all morning.

Calls were made, inter-network favors were called in, and the sports guys agreed to yield one half-hour of satellite time to us; commencing promptly at 6 Friday morning. We had to have our show done and delivered at that precise moment or — well, I don't know what would have happened. I was only told it would cause unconscionable trouble if we weren't there at 6 sharp.

Counting backward from Friday at 0600 hours, we would need around eight hours to do the final edit of the show, dropping in the clips that couldn't be expected until the night before, and around six hours to do the final sweetening. Sweetening is when you lay in the music and sound effects. The concept I'd proposed would call for dozens of sound effects.

So we'd sweeten and do the final edit on Thursday. Bob estimated that, with all the elaborate intercutting we'd need to do, we'd need three full days for the preliminary edit. That took care of Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. We decided to tape the show in a marathon session on Sunday.

(To give you an idea of how close we'd be cutting things: The TV Guide with our show listed came out six days before we taped. I hadn't even finished the script then, but we were already in TV Guide.)

Things went pretty much according to schedule. On Sunday, we taped from 10 a.m. until 2 in the morning. Our stars included Ted Knight, Joyce DeWitt, and Howie Mandel, all of whom were solid professionals and very good. (Ted got a little testy around 1 a.m., but it didn't last.)

Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday, we edited at the Post Group, just off Vine Street in Hollywood. Thursday, we did sweetening at a studio on Sunset, then drove out to Compact Video in Burbank for the final assembly.

The final layback was completed at around 4:15 a.m. A final layback is the combining of all elements — audio and video — into one reel. An engineer handed us a blue plastic case, about a foot square and an inch and a half thick, that contained one copy of our finished show on one-inch videotape. All we had to do now was to get it over to CBS by 6. Deep exhale.

Bob and I hadn't eaten since lunchtime, so we decided we'd drive in our separate cars to Tiny Naylor's restaurant, which was then at the intersection of Laurel Canyon and Ventura and open all night. We could dine, then Bob could go home, and I could drop off the tape on my way to bed. (Producers don't usually hand-deliver shows. Usually, messengers or assistants do, but I live right near CBS, and all our assistants were more exhausted than I was.)

We got to the restaurant at 4:30, and I brought the tape in for safekeeping. I joined Bob in a booth, and we agreed that we'd be fine if I left by 5:20. CBS was about a 15-minute drive from Laurel Canyon and Ventura. Over steak and eggs, we congratulated each other on completing the show and, groggy from lack of sleep, laughed over the incredible week we'd just survived.

At 5:20, we paid the check and left the restaurant. Bob jumped into his Fiat and headed for home. I got into my old Mercury Zephyr and started barreling through Laurel Canyon, confident I had plenty of time to get to CBS. I figured that once I got there, I'd just take the tape in and —

Major uh-oh.

I stopped in mid-thought and mid-canyon and felt every drop of blood drain from above the waist. Idiot Evanier had left the tape in the restaurant.

A few blocks past Mulholland, I invented the V-turn — not a U-turn; this was an honest-to-God "V" — and zoomed back through Laurel Canyon.

At 5:35, I raced into Tiny Naylor's parking lot. A waitress was outside, holding the blue plastic tape case. "Forget something?" she grinned. I grabbed the tape, tossed her a $5 tip, and dove back into the Mercury.

Laurel Canyon is a twisting, winding route, so I couldn't have burned too much rubber, even if I'd wanted to. "You'll make it in time," I told myself about 90 times as I drove, but I was doing a bad job of convincing me. I turned my radio to the all-news channel, listening for the correct time, hoping they'd say it was actually earlier than the clock on my dashboard claimed. (No such luck. It was actually a minute later.)

At 5:47 a.m., I saw CBS Television City looming before me and I started to untense a bit. I pulled my car into the Fairfax entrance driveway and —

Whoops. There was a chain up. That entrance was closed.

I executed another "V" and zoomed around to the Beverly

Point of View

Boulevard entrance —

Also closed.

I sped over to a private road on the east side of the building. Parking right outside the employees' entrance, I grabbed the tape and sprinted up to the door, which I found (of course) locked.

I knocked on it for a long minute, but there was no answer, so I began running around the massive, black-and-white CBS building, pounding on every door. I didn't have a watch on, but I knew I was almost out of time to get the tape to the proper department.

Panicked, I dashed all the way around the studio building to the artists' entrance.

It was locked, but, through the glass, a security guard could be seen sitting behind a desk. I rapped on the door, and, taking his own sweet time about it, he looked up from a paperback book, put down a cup of coffee, and waddled over and unlocked it.

"I have to be on the satellite in three minutes," I blurted, as I caught a glimpse of a clock just inside the door. It was 5:57.

The guard picked up a clipboard. "Name?"

I told him my name and spelled it, waving my tape canister and repeating that this show was desperately needed on the satellite in 180 seconds.

"I don't have you down here," he said.

"You don't understand," I begged. "This show airs tonight."

"And they told you to bring it here? Who told you?"

At that moment, I couldn't remember the name of anyone in CBS's broadcast division. I wasn't all that sure of my own name. All I could see was that minute hand nearing the 12, and a vision of dead air on the entire network that evening, commencing at 8. "Please, this has to be on the satellite at 6. They're waiting for it."

"I gotta check," he said. He took an extraordinarily long time to go to a phone, run his finger down a directory to the extension number, dial it, and tell someone, "I got a guy out here with a tape he says has gotta be on the satellite at 6." Then he said "Uh-huh" over and over for what seemed like several months.

"OK," the guard finally announced, shoving a sheet at me. "Sign in and take it to Broadcast Control." I scribbled my name as he rattled off some unintelligible directions. Then I hurried off down the hall, trusting in the Patron Saint of Producers (there must be one) to guide me to the proper door.

Within moments, I was hopelessly lost in dark corridors of Television City.

I ran down a hallway filled with prizes for The Price Is Right, took a wrong turn at the Young and the Restless set, and finally burst into Broadcast Control at 6:08 a.m.

I was terrified they'd say, "Sorry, you're too late. Instead of airing your show tonight, we're going to put on a half-hour of polka music and a sign saying the stupid producer didn't get the show here in time."

A nice man in shirtsleeves said nothing of the sort. He calmly took the tape from me and motioned to a monitor that was displaying that evening's episode of Dallas. "Good timing," he said. "Soon as we get through this, we're putting your show up on the bird." (I assumed the bird was the satellite; I didn't think they were going to have a large pigeon fly the reel to New York, though networks have done dumber things — hiring producers who leave tapes in restaurants, for instance.)

"Thanks," I mumbled. Then I staggered out, found my way back to my car, and went home and crawled into bed.

Around 2 in the afternoon, my phone started to ring with calls from various CBS bigwigs, saying they loved the show. I groggily thanked them but, at that moment, I wasn't as proud of it being good as of it being there.

Just before 5, I was back at CBS, in the executive offices. They'd called me over for a brief post-mortem/party. Bob couldn't make it, so I went over and watched the show on the East Coast feed with some execs. At its close, one of them asked if Bob and I would do the following year's preview special. I said yes, subject to Bob's assent.

That evening, when the show aired out here, we hosted a little party at Bob's house for some of the cast and crew. I told Bob about my early-a.m. delivery problems and how the network had asked us to do next year's show. Then I asked him if he had any thoughts for it.

He said, "Well, for one thing, we're not stopping at Tiny Naylor's."

• The Batman Chronicles #10 (Fall 97, DC, $2.95) is a bargain. It contains three stories: "To See The Batman," a text-with-pictures story written by Bob Gale and illustrated by Bill Sienkiewicz; "The Madman's Tale" written by Chris Duffy, pencilled by Javier Saltares, and inked by Mike Sellers; and "Odd Attachment" (pictured here) written and pencilled by Gary Frank, inked by Cam Smith.

The text story features evocative art and narrative that justifies a non-panel presentation. The other two are more "normal" comics storytelling — with characters designed to evoke reader empathy for a world in which The Batman is an ever-present force, not necessarily in the way in which its inhabitants expect.

• Colossus #1 (Oct 97, Marvel, $2.99) pretends with its number to be a new title, but the gatefold cover should make it clear to new readers that they're coming in in the middle of things. On the other hand, the gatefold cover also makes it possible to jump quickly aboard the story written by Ben Raab, pencilled by Bryan Hitch, and inked by Paul Neary. Meggan (an empath who can change her form) and Colossus (long-time X-Man) are on vacation in Paris. Hitch and Neary do a great job on body language, as the characters seek out an amusement park for diversion. Characters in the story are limited to two protagonists and two opponents tangling in the midst of the park. There's nothing out of the ordinary here — at least not for super-heroes and villainous conflict — but there are many pretty pictures and some enjoyable character interplay.

• A Distant Soil: The Gathering is a collection of a decade's worth of Colleen Doran's ongoing story. In October it'll be released as a 240-page book available in three editions: softcover, hardcover edition limited to 150 copies, and hardcover remarqued edition limited to 100 copies. It contains 13 comic-book issues, and the timespan of its creation may lead some to recall Preston Sweet's editorial in CBG #1242 about stories that are good but that have taken too long between installments.

What Doran has done with Image is produce a handy package that will suffice to bring everyone up to date on a graphic epic. Understand that the story is not completed in this volume; in fact, at the ending the overwhelming feeling is: And now our story really starts. On the other hand, the complex and tantalizing mix of characters and plot makes this a hard volume to put down at any point. The reader's frustration at hitting the ending should, however, be mitigated by the fact that Doran is now producing new installments at a faster pace. (The most recently shipped issue is #20.)

The science-fiction saga begins with a lonely teen-age brother and sister, imprisoned by authorities because they are, among other things, a danger to those about them. But the truth is far more complex, and the plot quickly involves other times, other worlds, and other skills — as an escape escalates into involvement with a variety of beings: some evil, some kind, all with complex agendas. Just as one example of Doran's talents, consider that she often conveys characters as playful. When was the last time you saw playful comics characters?

Doran's work is so popular she keeps getting sidetracked on invitations to work on other projects — but this is the one most dear to her heart and to the hearts of many of her fans. If you're not yet one of them because you haven't read DS and you enjoy a well-told adventure fantasy, you're missing a bet.

Once a year — OK, at least once a year — I become a drooling, gosh-wowing, tongue-tied fanboy. It happens about this time every year — when my CBG editors ask me to write a column about Mid-Ohio-Con and its promoter, Roger Price.

Mid-Ohio-Con is my favorite convention in the known universe.

I started attending it more than 15 years ago and, since then, I've become involved in the show on a number of levels. I've picked up guests at the airport and brought them to the hotel. I've thrown pre-con parties. I've set up at the show as an exhibitor. I've been host of and otherwise participated in dozens of panels. I've judged costume contests. I even supervised security for the show — at least until those completely unfounded allegations surfaced about how Beau Smith got the bite marks.

Then there's Roger Price himself, who, in no particular order, is one of my best friends, my agent, an incredibly charming guy, and an individual I admire tremendously, both for his remarkable achievements in raising funds for worthwhile causes and for his tireless — really, we stripped his car one year — promotion of the comics industry to the general public.

But wait. There's more.

Mid-Ohio-Con's "celebrity guests" always include some of the most talented and the nicest people in the comics field, creators who clearly love to get out and chat with their fans, discuss their work, sign autographs, and party down at the various bacchanalias, albeit refined and tasteful bacchanalias, that enliven those Mid-Ohio-Con nights. No egos required.

This year's line-up is as impressive as ever:

Murphy Anderson. Here we have a man who is not only one of the truly great artists of the "Silver Age of Comics," but is also knowledgeable about the artists of the "Golden Age," comic art in general, and science fiction. As he's said at past Mid-Ohio-Cons, he was and is a fan himself.

Sergio Aragonés. Aragonés is an original. His distinctive cartoons have graced Mad, comic books, and even television for decades. He's been all over the world and has more cool stuff in his head than most museums. I suspect if I asked him to draw me a picture of Groo in 4th century Roman armor, he'd ask, "North or south part of town?" and then proceed to draw the appropriate armor from memory.

Tom Batiuk. Batiuk is my neighbor here in Medina, so I get to know — nyahh, nyahh — what's happening in his Crankshaft and Funky Winkerbean strips months before you do. He's celebrating his 25th year on Funky and, instead of slowing down, he's become one of the most exciting cartoonists in the strip field.

Brian Bendis. Another local boy. This Cleveland artist has worked his butt off and all he's got to show for it is the acclaimed Jinx series, a couple of movie deals, and a weekly gig in the Cleveland Plain Dealer's Sunday Magazine. The mayor of Cleveland is gunning for him as a result of that last, so you know I've gotta like this bad boy.

Kurt Busiek. Busiek writes Kurt Busiek's Astro City, which is my second-favorite comic book. He writes Thunderbolts, which is my second-favorite Marvel comic book. He's going to be writing The Avengers and Iron Man, which will actually force me to buy them for the first time in years. I think he owes me lunch.

John Byrne. I've been a big fan of Byrne's work since he first walked into the Marvel offices in the 1970s. Since then, he has consistently written and drawn hundreds of great comic books. Byrne is also a hilarious auctioneer who has helped Mid-Ohio-Con raise something like a skadillion dollars for charity. I think I owe him lunch.

Mark Crilley. I've resisted as long as I can, but I'm giving Crilley a big hug this year. His Akiko is my favorite comic book, not just because it's brilliant work. There isn't anything else that compares with all the wonderful hours I've spent reading Akiko with my children, Eddie and Kelly.

Mark Evanier. I've known Evanier since we were teen-agers. He is a great writer, an ever greater human being, and the possessor of so much information he scares me. Most weeks, I read his CBG column before I read this one. He is one of a handful of people to whom I owe more than I can possibly repay, which is why I think he should stop sending those leg-breakers to my house.

James Hudnall. Another terrific writer. If you haven't been reading The Age of Heroes and ESPers, you're missing out on really good comics.

Bob Ingersoll. Yet another terrific writer. I'm starting to feel insecure. His "The Law is a Ass" column manages to be witty and informative. His comics writing is equally thoughtful. And I would say that even if he weren't collaborating with me on Captain America: Liberty's Torch, a paperback novel which will be coming to you in August 1998. Ask us about it at Mid-Ohio-Con. We won't tell you anything about it, but it'll make us feel good.

Cindy Johns. Johns is the fearless Blonde Avenger and someone you have to meet. Her gutsy opinions on the comics industry will make you think.

Leonard Kirk. The artist of Supergirl and Ultragirl is making his first Mid-Ohio-Con appearance. I love this guy's work!

Sheldon Moldoff. When I was a kid, I wanted to grow up to be Batman — except for the part about my parents getting shot up in a dark alley, of course. That was due in no small part to Moldoff's work, since he was the artist who actually drew so many of the 1950s Batman stories signed by Bob Kane.

Eddy Newell. I've worked with a lot of great artists during my 25 years in the comics industry and I hope they take no offense when I say that Newell is my favorite. From the moment we started working on Black Lightning, he captured the emotions I felt as I wrote the scripts and the look I saw in my head. We're going to distribute an ashcan of a new character at Mid-Ohio-Con, and that's just one of many joint projects to come.

Alvin Schwartz. I was thrilled when a mutual friend told me that Schwartz was interested in attending Mid-Ohio-Con. Schwartz was one of the top Batman and Superman writers in the 1940s and the 1950s and, save for one article and one interview, nothing has been written about him. Talk about sitting down with history. We (Price and that buttinsky Isabella) have asked comics historian Rich Morrissey to interview Schwartz for the entertainment and the edification of the Mid-Ohio-Con audience.

Quite a list, isn't it? And I don't have room to do more than mention novelists Kevin J. Anderson and Rebecca Moesta, actress Brinke Stevens, comics creators Darryl Banks, Franchesco, Rachel Hartman, Kyle Hotz, Paul Jenkins, Tara Jenkins, Bill Knapp, Steve Lieber, David Mack, Christopher Mills, Terry Moore, Mart Nodell, Ken Penders, David Quinn, P. Craig Russell, Beau Smith, Paul Smith, Chris Sprouse, Roger Stern, Jill Thompson, Matt Webb, Bernie Wrightson, and others.

But wait. There's more.

The guests are only part of the fun of Mid-Ohio-Con. Price's congenial nature must be contagious, because the fans who attend the event and the exhibitors who sell them comics, cards, toys, and countless other wondrous treasures are a joy to chat with, barter with, and even share some laughs with.

I love Mid-Ohio-Con. I only wish I could talk Price into having it every weekend.

Tony Isabella — here's a big surprise — will be at Mid-Ohio-Con Nov. 29 and 30, at the Adam's Mark Hotel in downtown Columbus.

The show runs from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. on Saturday and 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Sunday.

Tony will be there from the beginning to the "please, just let me buy one more comic book" end.

If you'd like to comment on this column, the address is: Tony's Tips, P.O. Box 1502, Medina, OH 44258. You can email Tony at: tonyisa@ohio.net.

High-end collectibles: Fine art (usually) minus museum prices

Designed by John Romita, this Spider-Man statue was one of the very first comics character statues.

"It's always easier to find 1000 consumers to pick up a statue or beer glass set than it is to find 50,000 consumers to buy a typical comic book today."
— Bob Chapman

By Matt Brady

High-end collectibles tug at the heartstrings (and wallets) of the older collector. As a kid reading Spider-Man in the '70s, who wouldn't have wanted a Spider-Man statue standing on the shelf, arms posed in the classic web-spinning pose — or a painted Spider-Man print framed on the wall? It's 20 years later, and that collectible is only $200 away. Needless to say, many fans have responded to the appeal of high-end collectibles.

As well as recapturing childhoods, high-end products are a way for many collectors to express themselves to their friends without inviting everyone over to the closet to see a comics collection. And, of course, there's the bonus of possessing collectibles that may just increase in value and give a nice return to the buyer in a few years.

High-end pieces also represent a meaty cash cow for their producers. Whether they create the product themselves or sell a limited license to a manufacturer, there's money to be made.

"I don't think it comes as a surprise to anyone that the comics market has slowed," Dark Horse's Kimberly Nielsen said. "High-end products help us in two ways: They act to support our titles — plus they stand on their own and diversify our product line, so we're not solely dependent on comic-book sales."

Nielsen's comments were echoed by other high-end manufacturers. While industry pundits are sounding if not the death, at least the really sick-knell for comic books, high-ends appear to be going strong. Moore Creations' Michele Bryant summed up the feelings of many producers. "The market is surprisingly strong and improving. We've seen orders increase pretty much across the board for most of our products. Our orders on our Lady Death snowglobe, the first time we offered it, had such a tremendous response, we had to increase production."

DC Marketing Services Manager Syndee Barwick pointed out that, while the high-end market may seem to be its own beast, it is definitely dependent on the comics market. "It really goes hand in hand with the comics. The high-end market can't exist without the content from our editorial department. Even though a lot of our products stand on their own and suggest that the market is very strong and robust, they wouldn't be around if the comic book hadn't been there first."

But Graphitti's Bob Chapman said that, while the high-end market seems to be stronger than the comics market, one factor must be considered: The high-end market is smaller than the comics market. "You're looking at a small quantity of people, most often between 1000 to 5000, who are looking to buy high-end products. It's always easier to find 1000 consumers to pick up a statue or beer glass set than it is to find 50,000 consumers to buy a typical comic book today."

Randy Bowen of Bowen Designs cautioned that, as with comic books, too much of anything can slow the market to a crawl and alienate customers. "There are so many sculptures being offered every month that retailers are becoming very selective about the statues that they're ordering. My biggest concern is that, by not limiting the quantity of product that's being released, the audience for this type of product might come to feel that they're being manipulated."

Creative License's Bonnie Berryman agreed. "At this point, the high-end market is more stable than the comics market, but there is a fear that there are getting to be too many products out there."

So just who buys these items anyway?

The overwhelming majority of buyers across the board seem to be men and women [see sidebar] between 20 and 50 years old with a level of financial stability and some attachment to the character of license.

Berryman said, "Most of our products are more than $100, so we're talking about someone with the financial capability to be able to purchase an object at that price. So right there, we're looking at the higher end of the comic-book-reader spectrum. We're also talking about someone who could recognize the quality and craftsmanship that a sculpture or other product represents."

Chapman came to the same conclusion. "They seem to be loyal and older fans, fans where, if you give them the right thing, they're more in the position to spend their money — if it's the right character in the right pose. Additionally, they might not even be active fans. They may just have a soft spot in their hearts for, say, Superman, and think a Superman print or statue would look cool in their office."

Bowen agreed. "For the most part, our customers are middle-income comics and movie fans who are looking for something interesting to symbolize their interest in comics and related media. Our customers cover all the bases: They tend to be male, but we have plenty of women, too.

"They're mostly in their 20s to 40s and are lawyers, doctors, animators, housewives, and everything in between."

The same goes for DC. Barwick said, "We feel that a lot of our customers are fans of the original comics, but we do a lot of advertising outside of the regular comics venues for our higher-priced, more collectible items. While it's hard to judge response to those ads, we have heard stories of people coming in off the street who'd never heard of our comics buying Starman watches and the Sandman bookends, so the word might just be getting out."

And then there is the extreme. Carl Barks Studio's Bill Grandey said, "People in their 50s and 60s will come in and buy $10,000 of serigraphs. We also have completists for everything we make. We've made eight bronzes of Barks' work so far, and there are more than a few people out there who have all eight. They root us on and buy any image we put out."

Another Rainbow's Steve Calrow agreed. "Some of our customers who buy the Barks figurines have never even heard of Barks but are used to buying high-end china and collectibles from art galleries. One of our customers wants three of everything that comes out, one for each of their homes: one for the house in Switzerland, one for Flori-

A number of manufacturers have produced a plethora of limited-edition collectibles including rings featuring Xavier's School for Gifted Students and the X-O Manowar logo, an Omaha statue, a Laser Mach sculpture of the Fantastic Four fighting Galactus, a Superman mug, reproductions of Disney storybooks with audio CDs (Dippy the Goof is pictured), a Skippy doll (the little fellow in aviator gear) from FAO Schwarz, a Sandman statue, a Spider-Man keychain promoting the upcoming (in 1993) James Cameron film, a Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles Leonardo bust, an Incredible Hulk medallion, Bone pins, the Vertigo Tarot deck, a Concrete statue, the DC Archives series, a Fone Bone statue, and a Death statue.

DC's Sandman bookends frame several limited-edition books including Danger Unlimited, Elfquest Book 1, The Crow, Marvels, Mage, Havoc/Wolverine, Bongo Comics Spectacular, Watchmen, and the Kingdom Come slipcased set. Russ Cochran's slipcased reprint set of EC's Modern Love sits behind the other books, while the top of Upper Deck's wooden box containing one of its hundreds of card sets is in the right-hand corner. A corner of Laser Mach's sculpture featuring Carnage, Spider-Man, and Venom can be seen at lower left.

da, and one for the third. High-end customers in general just love this stuff."

High-ends also are responsible for a paradox: Customers who buy more than 20 comics a month will be the first ones in line to complain when a publisher raises the price of their comics 5¢, while some of these same customers will look at a $200 statue and say, "Hmmm — that's not a bad price." Why are comics readers frugal on the one end but willing to spend on the other?

Horizon's Jim Turner had one answer. "Apples and oranges. A comic book is produced very easily and very cheaply with tens of thousands of copies. Most figures and other objects have low print runs of a few thousand. That's a lot different than a comic book, so the perceived value is different.

"I know a lot of people don't like to call these products collectible, but, on some level, I think the buyer realizes he or she is buying something that only a few thousand other people could have, rather than 50-75,000. When you take that into consideration, people are more willing to spend the money for the higher-priced items."

Also, Bryant pointed out that there is a real aesthetic return on high-end items. "A lot of people keep their comics in special plastic bags, closed up in special cardboard boxes, hidden away in the dark somewhere. When someone buys our product, they're buying it so it can be placed somewhere where it will be seen, not hidden away in the closet. People will pay for showpieces that go out in the living room. They're willing to spend money on and display objects that show absolute quality, rather than a cheaper, more mass-produced product."

But what's the appeal? What causes comics readers to give up their hard-earned dollars for a statue, a print, or other high-priced item? Two themes were repeated by nearly all manufacturers: image and execution. First and foremost, the product must portray a character that the fan is interested in. Second, the character, no matter what medium it's presented in, has to look cool. This holds true from Image Comics' characters to Uncle Scrooge — and everyone between.

Grandey said, "Oddly enough, I think that image may actually be more important than execution. In other words, if you have an Uncle Scrooge buyer, we've seen that they would select something that wasn't executed well, if the image turned them on."

Berryman agreed and pointed out that nailing the right image of a character so it will appeal to customers is no easy task. "The key is capturing the personality of a character in three dimensions, which is no simple task, since until now, the character has mostly been portrayed in only two. People are starting to appreciate how difficult this is today, though. The more sculptures that are out there, the more people are becoming familiar with what is a good sculpture. As the market has matured, it seems that each new sculpture gets better and better."

Along with the image, Bowen spoke of two other factors that play a role in the appeal of the items. "My guess would be that the statues and other products symbolize the collectors' penchant for a given character. And, depending on what statue you buy, it can go way up in value, which is a nice added bonus. Case in point: The Batman cold cast-statue. It originally sold for around a hundred bucks. These days, you can't touch one for less than $700 on the secondary market."

Also, as Nielsen said, high-end merchandise allows readers of a comics series to experience the comic book on a different level. "A lot of customers want to get the comics-related merchandise, like our Sin City shot glass or lighter, because it adds to the escapism. A collectible like that breaks the fourth wall between the reader and the characters and pulls you into the story in some level. You're more than a reader when you have a Kadie's Club Pecos cigarette lighter. You may not be saying the lines out loud or acting out what's going on in the comic book, but on some level, you feel as if you're a participant in the story."

Barwick agreed. "They like the extension of the character. They want something else to augment their reading experience. For example, they've seen the Legion of Super-Heroes members wearing flight rings for years, and now they can actually own a fine reproduction of one."

Nielsen also stressed that a lot of high-end items have a bigger meaning sociologically. "With pop culture being such a large part of our daily experience in today's world, we find that most of our high-end buyers are more plugged into mass media than their parents were or are. For many of them, the pieces represent the 'fine art' that their parents collected. While they might not have the same cultural acceptance, these sculptures and other products are the Hummels and the Lladros of this generation on a certain level."

When it comes down to purchase time, whether it's a premeditated, planned, and budgeted purchase or an impulse buy at a convention, a major factor of what usually shifts the balance in terms of purchase or pass is the ever undefinable "coolness" factor. Does the character have the right look, is it the right pose, or of growing importance? What the heck object is the image of the character on, anyway?

All those questioned agreed that a key to maintaining product "coolness" is diversification among high-end items. When companies started producing pricier comics-related products, it was mostly limited to statues and prints of their most popular characters. Nowadays, items aren't just limited to a couple of narrow categories. High-end comics-related merchandise spans the entire spectrum, including Christmas ornaments of Lady Death (Moore Creations), laser-cut two-dimensional sculptures of Marvel characters (Laser Mach), pewter representations of characters bursting from a comic-book base (Comic Book Champions), a Wolverine pen set in which the claws are actually pens (Creative License), and a Legion of Super-Heroes flight ring replica.

But when it comes right down to it, who decides what product to make? How is the decision made that Hellboy would work on a lighter, whereas Lobo would work best as a statue? The answer? Research.

According to Grandey, the decision of exactly what product to make with the property depends on several factors. "It depends what time period we're in. A few years back, the Barks Uncle Scrooge money bin images were so popular that anything that portrayed them was a safe bet. Now, there're

Who collects it?

There's a strange ratio when it comes to high-end pieces. According to most producers, women make up almost half the customer base. That's a pretty sharp difference from comics, where women make up barely 10% of the audience. "The high-end market is as good as or better for females than for males," Moore's Michele Bryant said. "We have a lot of women who collect our products, but the response we had on The Princess, based on the artwork by Frank Frazetta, was just phenomenal. We figure the response we saw was most likely due to the fact that it was a realistic portrayal of a beautiful, voluptuous woman, not a rail-thin model — but something that women were really inspired by as well as a beautiful sculpture. It's encouraging to see such a strong response from women."

Grandey confirmed Bryant's conclusion. "We just had an Uncle Scrooge collectibles meeting. The population of the group was split pretty much 50-50, men to women. There are a lot of women, both married and single, who are Uncle Scrooge collectors."

While it could be argued, in a completely non-sexist way, that women may be more attracted to Uncle Scrooge and Disney collectibles than mainline comic-book characters, Bryant and other comics character producers said they see more women, if not buying, then taking a large role in the selection process of such high-end items as statues and prints.

Looking for other reasons for women's large participation in the high-end market, research indicates that women, by and large, are still in charge of the finances in most households. If anyone is going to green light or make that big purchase, you can bet that in most households, it will be the woman.

Grandey said, "I think women get just as enthused as men do when they are looking at spending $2000-$3000. They're going to be very picky about how it looks and probably already have an idea where they're going to put it in their home or office."

Grandey also brought up another important point about households: Generally, women are in charge of decorating. What would work on top of the entertainment center? The Lady Death porcelain, of course. On the wall in the bedroom? How about that cool print from Star Wars?

And this doesn't just apply to married women. Based on casual observation, one could put forth the suggestion that on average, single women are more expressive than single men about decorating — and, therefore, more willing to buy and display objects that guys might see as too artsy for a bachelor pad.

All of these factors may combine to result in the greater number of women buying high-end products — or this could just be an all-too-male speculation.

— Matt Brady

Randy Bowen on the Batman cold-cast statue: "These days, you can't touch one for less than $700 on the secondary market."

Moore Creations' Michele Bryant said that part of the appeal of the Princess statue was that it "was a realistic portrayal of a beautiful, voluptuous woman, not a rail-thin model."

enough of them out there so people are able to choose the best of them rather than pick up every one that comes out. Demand for particular images and objects changes from year to year. Right now, people are going nuts over the Barks art tiles and bronze busts, which are huge, 50-pound art objects. But demand probably won't stay high on these for that long — there seems to be a real trend to find new types of products.

"We're very careful when we choose an image and a product. We get a group together and discuss it, because it's very easy for a couple of us to get really excited about a design or an image, and sometimes that particular design may not be just what the public is looking for. The market is very competitive for the dollar of the customer. The successful people in the collectible business will be thinking of new ideas for products."

Nielsen said that things are similar at Dark Horse. "Our decisions are creator-driven and market-driven, and we have a team considering every product we put out as well as getting feedback from our website. What we really strive for is matching the property with the character. For example, the lighters we've done fit well with the characters that are portrayed on them. You could see Marv or Hellboy using the lighters that have come out with their likeness."

According to Nielsen, Dark Horse, like most other companies, has been testing the waters for the past few years. "We've been going kind of slowly for the past few years with different types of products, but we're getting stronger. We're on a learning curve here, so everything we've done has had a little 'test market' feel to it."

Also, even though he's limited to one type of product, Laser Mach's Matt Ligot explained that he aims his sculptures to fill a need. "I'm a comics and statue collector myself, so I try to make statues that aren't being done right now, like the Fantastic Four, which couldn't be done in a team format in porcelain for less than $400. Sometimes I do get a specific order from Marvel, but, mostly, I go with what 'needs' to be done. Also, by doing pieces that aren't being done or can't be done in the particular medium I work in, I'm filling a gap between the $150 porcelains and the action figures.

"All of the images of characters I use I take the inspiration right from a comic book or cartoon. I'm always looking for a pose that is instantly recognizable as that particular character."

Surprisingly, Barwick said that DC doesn't use such firm criteria as monthly sales when deciding what property gets the high-end treatment. "We do whatever we feel will help sell the comic book. We want to support our best-selling titles but we also want to generate interest and support our medium sellers and our low sellers, as well. Also, we like to support our freelancers, so we'll do all-new art for a print or hire them to do preliminary sketch designs for a statue. A lot of what we do originally comes to us as ideas from retailers or fans, so we're always interested in what our readers have to say, as well. Generally, if the idea works and doesn't compromise the integrity of the character and we can find a manufacturer, we'll do it."

And don't forget about the do-it-yourselfers. Horizon Hobbies' Jim Turner said that customer feedback and suggestion is important in deciding what model or statuette to come out with next. "All of our products have a customer reply card which allows the consumer to tell us what to make. We evaluate that information along with the rest of the market, what the other companies are doing, and what the companies we're dealing with would like us to make. Usually, it comes down to the most popular characters, but we do get requests for more obscure characters from time to time."

Along with diversifying products to match different characters to unique products, Berryman pointed out a very practical reason for diversification: give the customer a break. "We try not to always be hitting the same audience. We diversified our line early, because retailers were telling us that the limited statues would sell out, leaving nothing to display in their stores. That's when we created the gift-type items that are produced in unlimited runs — to meet customer demand for a particular character. For example, if a person missed the Wolverine statue, they don't necessarily have to wait for the next one. They could get the Wolverine desk set.

"Also, we've listened to the customers, and, by our offering a diversified line of products, they don't have to spend $100 every time they pick up one of our items. For example, if you want an X-Men collectible, you could pick up the Storm Christmas ornament for $30, rather than the Bishop statue for $100. It's our feeling that no one should be shut out of this market. In that same vein, we also like to give our customers breathers in a series of statues rather than release them really close together."

Barwick agreed. "It's really important to offer characters on a variety of diverse products not only because, from our point of view, it exposes the character more, but also offering a range of products gives a range of price points. We realize that there are a lot of fans out there who can't afford the statues or high-end museum-quality prints, so we make products specifically for them."

Or, on the other end of the spectrum, you can choose what character will go on what product, as Randy Bowen joked. "Personally, I have no real system for choosing a character to release as a statue or magnet or whatever. More often than not, it's usually a friend's character or someone who approaches us with a positive attitude or just someone I end up having drinks with at a convention. There's no scientific method on my part, so, if any creators or publishers out there read this — buy me a beer, and let's talk!"

But even sometimes the best research doesn't work. Nielsen said, "We've never had what you could call a true bomb of a product. We've had miscalculations where we were really hot on a particular creator's character or series and wanted to get merchandise out right away, and we found out that the audience for the merchandise just wasn't there."

Despite the occasional miscalculation, all producers said they were confident that the high-end market is here to stay, provided things don't get flooded out with too much product. Berryman said, "If we can maintain a high-quality product at an affordable price that features a character or characters that fans will recognize and think is cool, and keep releases paced out, there's no reason we won't be around as long as or longer than the characters themselves."

Creative License produced a Storm Christmas ornament.

High-end plans lead to more choices

By Matt Brady

And, lest you think the high-end market is going to go away any time soon, check out what's coming up:

• Bowen Designs: "Frank Frazetta's Death Dealer will be out by December," Bowen said. "Matt Wagner's Kevin Matchstick/Mage statue, Paul Chadwick's Concrete bust, and Mike Mignola's Hellboy statue will all be out next spring and summer. The Star Wars Rancor Pit monster bronze is coming soon, along with something original we're calling Jimmy Legs, and The Bride of Metropolis (which will cause some minor commotion) are all coming soon, along with lots of other cool stuff that I can't mention just yet."

• Carl Barks Studio: "We have some bronze that will be able to go on the wall, which will represent a complete departure for us," Grandey said. "We're also going to try two figures out of the same painting again — not quite a companion set, but two figures that go together."

• Creative License: "We've got some new television licenses that we'll be coming out with soon, along with our Marvel products," Berryman said. "As with our treatment of the Marvel characters, we'll be going in-depth with our new licenses and provide collectors with products and views of popular characters they can't get anywhere else."

• Dark Horse: "We just secured the license for pre-painted cold-cast resin figures for the X-Files movie including Scully and Mulder — which is very exciting, because Chris Carter has been very protective about the licenses for the likenesses of the main characters until now," Nielsen said. "We're also going to continue with the Star Wars bronze line as well as start to produce figures of key Magic characters for Wizards of the Coast."

• DC Comics: "We've got a great statue program set for next year with at least two figures that will really surprise people," Barwick said. "We'll continue with our mini-statue line and may create some originals for that particular line, rather than just repeat designs that we've already done. We've also got more rings and more watches planned — and a lot of different surprises. Also, we'll be expanding our price range from $3.95 up to the bookends at $295, so there should be something there for everyone's budget."

• Laser Mach: "I'm currently renegotiating my contract with Marvel, but I'm also working on 35th anniversary sculptures of Daredevil, The X-Men, and The Avengers," Ligot said. "I'd also like to do mini-sculptures of Deadpool and Phoenix, if Marvel gives the OK. I'm also working with Elfquest, so I'll hopefully have something coming out with those characters soon, as well."

• Moore Creations: "Our Classic Monster line will kick off early next year with Frankenstein and include The Wolfman, The Creature from the Black Lagoon, and The Mummy," Bryant said. "We've also got a science-fiction robots line coming up, along with more snowglobes and other projects with Top Cow characters."

Comics. Characters. Independents.
Stories. Values. History.
Details. And (yes) more...

Turn your silver to GOLD with tens of thousands of updated, accurate prices and exacting details for 36 years of the best comics in The 1998 Comic Book Checklist & Price Guide 1961-Present !

Get the most details possible with a separate entry for each issue. You'll find the original cover prices and cover dates – plus numbers and titles – to help you positively identify your valuable finds.

Keep track of your own inventory with the handy checkbox in front of each entry. See at a glance what you've got, what you want, and what a reasonable price would be for that item.

You can also enlighten yourself with background profiles of both classic and newer characters and discover the unknown with independent releases, cult titles and hard-to-find editions overlooked by others.

Everything you want to know about the SILVER AGE of comics (1961) to the present – 36 years of details – is all here! And you can take it with you anywhere, because it comes in a convenient, easy-to-carry size for use at home or shows.

- EXTENSIVELY ANNOTATED AND UPDATED
- More than 75,000 comics check-listed and priced to keep you up-to-date
- More than 225,000 prices in 3 grades of condition for accurate evaluations.
- Accurate listings of issue number, title, current value, original cover date and price

On November 29 and 30, Mid-Ohio-Con will mark its 18th annual show and celebrate at the Adam's Mark Hotel in downtown Columbus, Ohio.

Referred to by show organizers as "Ohio's Best Comic Book Show," Mid-Ohio-Con is an event for fans and collectors of comic books, comic strips, and cartoon art to give them an opportunity to expand their collections and knowledge. The show features appearances by big-name celebrities, special events, and speciality retailers. Over the years the number of comic-book and comic-strip artists, writers, editors, and publishers appearing at the show has grown from just four in 1980 to more than 150 in 1996. Annually, thousands of people from all over the United States, Canada, and Europe attend the event. It attracts established comic-book and cartoon fans as well as members of the general public looking to recapture their youth or experience the fun of comic books, comic strips, and cartoons for the first time.

Created by Roger Price, Mid-Ohio-Con actually started out as "The North Central Ohio Comic Book and SF Convention" in the basement ballroom of Mansfield, Ohio's Park Place hotel. The first guests to attend were P. Craig Russell, Don and Maggie Thompson, and local newspaper artist Mike Meek. The name of the show was officially changed to Mid-Ohio-Con the second year — which was also the first of what would become 16 appearances (and counting) by comics artist and writer John Byrne. For the first nine years of its existence Mid-Ohio-Con was a major fund-raising event affiliated with the March of Dimes Birth Defects Foundation. For its 10th anniversary, after the March of Dimes elected to pursue other fund-raising efforts, Price began producing the show independently under the banner of R.A.P. Productions. Mid-Ohio-Con has continued its history of philanthropic support by raising several thousand dollars to benefit such organizations as Ronald McDonald Children's Charities, Ronald McDonald House, The Comic Book Legal Defense Fund, and Public Broadcasting. Four years ago Mid-Ohio-Con officially relocated to Ohio's capital city, Columbus.

In 1996, Price was presented with the Comics Buyer's Guide Comics Ambassador Award in recognition of his efforts to promote comics to an ever-widening audience.

After three successful years at the Hyatt Regency Hotel, this year will see Mid-Ohio-Con moving to Columbus' newest downtown hotel, the Adam's Mark, a move designed to see the show through to the year 2000.

The Grand Ballroom of the Adam's Mark is just one of the many areas of the hotel that will be devoted to Mid-Ohio-Con.

Comics professionals, including Shelly Moldoff (above), have contributed original sketches over the years to Mid-Ohio-Con for use in the program book and for the charity auction.

Mid-Ohio-Con: It's fun

By Bob Ingersoll

I don't know when it was that my life changed for the better, but I know where. It was the basement of a little hotel in Mansfield, Ohio, and I was attending my first Mid-Ohio-Con. I didn't know it at the time but I had, as the saying goes, let the fun begin.

As I said, I don't remember when. It was probably the second or third Mid-Ohio-Con ever. Don and Maggie Thompson were the only guests I remember being there. Programming consisted of a bunch of us sitting around and talking to Don and Maggie about comics, cons, science fiction, and whatever else interested us. (I do remember one story they recounted — about an Indiana Jones-clad attendee at some other con cracking his bullwhip in the middle of a crowded dealer's room, until the hotel security advised him, pointedly, that this was not a good idea. A wise man, that security guard.)

Since then Mid-Ohio-Con has grown. From the basement of this small hotel in Mansfield to a large hangar-like building on the Richland County fairgrounds. (For many of us, the barn on the fairgrounds will always be Mid-Ohio-Con: the one-room cavern with inadequate heating, inadequate sound system, inadequate space for programming, and more than enough fun to make up for the barn.) Then, when Mid-Ohio-Con outgrew the barn, it moved to the convention facilities of the Ohio Center in Columbus, Ohio (after a couple of stops along the way in other facilities that were not quite adequate, even if the fun always made up for the facility). This year the show has grown again, moving from Ohio Center to its new, and best, facility in the Adam's Mark Hotel.

Yes, Mid-Ohio-Con has grown. Not like Topsy. For her, growing was a natural and unstoppable natural occurrence. Comic-book conventions do not grow naturally or unstoppably. They grow, if they are well-run, pleasant, and fun. Most of all fun. They grow because positive word of mouth tells others — fans and pros alike: Come to the show. You won't regret it. It's well-run, pleasant, and fun. Most of all fun.

Roger Price has made Mid-Ohio-Con all of those things: well-run, pleasant, and fun. Most of all fun. And the show has grown bigger and better every year, because of the loving care which Roger puts into it so that we, the attendees, can get the most out of it.

It seems that every year, just when I thought I couldn't look forward to Mid-Ohio-Con more than I had last year, I do. This year is not only no exception; it's worse. I'm not just looking forward to Nov. 29 and 30; I'm waiting for them as impatiently as my 11-year-old waits for Christmas. You see, I've seen the new facility and it's a honey. Just one look and you know that this is the perfect venue for a wonderful show. This year the show finally has a facility adequate to match the fun. And I don't want to wait for Mid-Ohio-Con to take it over and let that fun begin again.

Unfortunately for me, I missed some of the early Mid-Ohio-Cons. My loss. I know my second was the 1985 show. I've been back every year since then. My gain. I also know that I'll be back for every Mid-Ohio-Con that will come. I'll stop going to Mid-Ohio-Con, when they pry my invitation from my cold, dead fingers. Maybe not even that will stop me.

It's just that much fun.

Signed "Cartoonists Constitution" Print For Sale

This is a large (34x25) colorful print, containing over 75 of the most famous comic and cartoon characters interacting with each other. This limited edition print contains original signatures by 56 comic strip and comic book artists including: Charles Schulz, Jim Davis, Mort Walker, Harvey Kurtzman, Stan Lee, Al Jaffee, Johnny Hart, Jack Davis, Sergio Aragones, and Bil Keane to name a few. Less than 200 of these prints were made in 1987. These originally sold for $2000 and have sold much higher in auctions. Asking $900 plus postage. Call to reserve or for additional information. Jason Levine, 219 E. 69th Street, New York, NY 10021 (212) 472-5982

COMICS BUYER'S GUIDE COMICS STRIP

COMICS STRIP changes the way you and the consumer think about advertisements and allows you to display your talents to the Comics Buyer's Guide readers in a format that you and they love the best.

We do ask in the spirit of the comic-strip that your material be suitable (sorry, no profanity, nudity or extreme violence) for all ages.

Each COMICS STRIP is 2-5/8"h x 10"w, and it's within this creative framework that the fun really begins. You'll use at least 3/4 of the space to tell a strip joke, one-panel funny or other attention grabbing notion using sequential art. You'll want to use the remaining 1/4 to promote your actual publication.

Below is a example of how your strip might look...

the Statue SHELF

"Buy the best quality you can afford. Ideally, you'll want to own something fresh to the market. But you should also love it."
— Christie's Managing Director Patricia Hambrecht
The 1997 Practical Guide to Practically Everything

An occasional guide to all things petrified!

Primary Statuary

The first figurine or statue based on a comic-strip character was neither Superman (whose first statue appeared in 1941, done by Syroco) nor Buster Brown (a figurine of whom appeared in 1920). Krazy Kat creator George McManus designed a 4½" figure based on his Snookums character in 1906.

Even in the modern era, the first statue based on a comic-book character was not inspired by a super-hero. The first modern comics character to be sculpted was Omaha the Cat Dancer. Kitchen Sink released the statue in 1989.

Unless you count pin-up queen Betty Page as a comic-book character. Page has been the model for various comics characters over the years and has even been the heroine of her own comics titles. Graffiti Designs produced a Betty Page statue in the late 1980s, probably before Kitchen Sink's Omaha statue.

Graffiti Designs also began the modern comics/super-hero statue craze by producing a piece based on Neil Gaiman's Sandman. Sculpted by Randy Bowen, the Sandman statue was originally limited to 1800 units and is the most valuable mass-run edition the company ever produced. Originally priced at $90, it is valued today at nearly $1000.

Graffiti's first super-hero DC Comics statue was a Batman piece designed by Dick Giordano and sculpted by Bowen.

— Marc Patten

Statues take shape for the holidays

By Marc Patten

This holiday season brings another resin sculpture from Applause: Sorceror Supreme Doctor Strange. The hand-painted statue measures 9½ x7˝ x 6½ and is limited to 1500 pieces. It retails for $150.

In celebration of the 35th anniversaries of the amazing Spider-Man and the incredible Hulk, Bowen Designs will produce two bronze statues based on classic 1960s images of each character. Limited to 100 pieces, each statue will include a mini-bust of the character's alter ego with the first 35 pieces. The statues will primarily be available through the direct market, but some will be offered through such retail chains as FAO Schwartz.

Graffiti Designs will offer a cold-cast porcelain statue based on Burne Hogarth's Tarzan and a Smiley Bone statue, the third piece in the Bone statue series. The Tarzan statue is limited to 500 pieces and is priced at $295. Produced in scale with last spring's Red Dragon sculpture, the Smiley Bone statue is priced at $79.95.

Already available from Dark Horse and Bowen Designs are The Abducted Smoking Alien and The Flukeman from the X-Files Paranormal Collection. Each has been sculpted at ⅛ scale and is priced at $125.

Clayburn Moore turns from monsters to robots

By Matt Brady

Following closely on the announcement of Moore Creations' classic monster line, sculptor Clayburn Moore recently confirmed that he will also producie a line of robot sculptures.

The line is scheduled to include Crow, Gypsy, and Tom Servo from Mystery Science Theater 3000 and the Cylons from Battlestar Galactica, but Moore said he's not stopping there. "We're also going after the licenses for Robbie the Robot from Forbidden Planet and Robot from the original Lost in Space," Moore said. "If all goes well with those, we're going to try to get the license for the robot from Fritz Lang's Metropolis."

For Moore, creating robots fulfills a childhood dream. "I've always loved robots," Moore said. "When I was a kid, I saw Forbidden Planet and was absolutely fascinated by Robbie. The idea that this machine of glass and polished metal that was created to serve man's needs could have the potential to develop its own personality, character, and values is a wonderful science-fiction theme that I've always found intriguing."

The line will begin with the MST3K robots in the spring of 1998. The Cylons are scheduled to follow in late summer, with releases about every three months after that.

Psylocke statue follows Bishop into the Danger Room

X-Woman Psylocke is the latest in the line of cold-cast porcelain figurines from Creative License.

Shipping to retailers in time for holiday sales, the Psylocke statue is a companion piece to the Bishop statue released in July. Set in the Danger Room, as the Bishop piece was, Psylocke agilely avoids deadly tentacles and a trapdoor while wielding her psychic knife.

Creative License President Bonnie Berryman said, "The Psylocke figurine is one of the most dynamic and daring pieces we have produced so far. Psylocke is completely suspended in mid-air with her hair flying about her, portraying an incredible, life-like movement in this statue. Dean Musson, the sculptor of this piece, has once again created a superior figurine which shows his expert sculpting capabilities. I think this statue is even better than the Silver Surfer statue he produced in 1996 for Creative License."

The statue measures 10x5½x5˝ and is scheduled to ship in December.

As with each Creative License product, the Psylocke statue comes with a certificate of authenticity.

the toy box

New product helps Star Wars action figures take a stand. When does a toy become a statue? U.S. Forces has an idea for how to give Star Wars action figures a second career during their periods of inaction.

Currently only available to comics stores and collectors' shops, U.S. Forces' Action Stands are designed to allow Star Wars action figures to be displayed in a standing position. This allows the action-figure owner to show them off when not playing with them. It's also a way for toy collectors to display their collection.

In fact, U.S. Forces pointed out, the stands enhance the playability of the figures, as well, because the figures cannot stand on their own two feet without the aid of the stands.

Each package of five stands has a suggested retail price of $2.95.

Company sells cels to collectors

Willitts Designs has begun to release a second series of Star Wars limited-edtion film cels, this set featuring scenes from The Empire Strikes Back. Marketing Coordinator Joseph Noriel said cels from Return of the Jedi are expected to be released by the end of the year.

For $25, a collector receives a 70mm film cel from a print made from the original internegative archived in the 20th Century Fox film vault, as well as a color widescreen scene reproduction and a history card featuring concept artwork from the film and descriptions of memorable moments and behind-the-scenes information from the movie. The whole package is encased in an acrylic holder about the size of a trading-card pack. The cels are being marketed in counter displays, much as trading cards are sold.

Tamper-proof holographic seals are used to help prevent fraudulent duplication, and a serial-numbered identification code verifies that each cel is one of a kind.

Willitts President and CEO Joe Walsmith said, "The film cel is quickly emerging as one of today's hottest new collectible categories. The fact that no two cels are alike should ensure longtime collectibility and strong secondary market value."

The series from The Empire Strikes Back will include four editions — "Luke Skywalker," "Rebel Alliance," "Imperial Attack," and "The Millennium Falcon" — plus a "Yoda" edition only available in the first 2000 assortments shipped.

Shipping alongside this series are cels from The X-Files, including scenes from the pilot, "The Erlenmeyer Flask," "Squeeze," and "Ice," as well as cels devoted to Mulder, Scully, Deep Throat, and The Cigarette-Smoking Man.

Doll line represents TVland from George Bailey to Babylon 5

Beginning this fall, Exclusive Toy Products Inc. will introduce several series of 9" limited-edition dolls, each based on a classic television show and most carrying a suggested retail price of less than $20.

A set of Babylon 5 dolls is scheduled for a Nov. 1 release to the direct market exclusively through Diamond Comic Distributors. It includes figures of Lennier, Marcus Cole, and Vir. At the same time, figures of Ambassador Delenn, Ambassador G'Kar, and Capt. John Sheridan are scheduled to be released exclusively to Toys 'R' Us. The series includes a space station and display stand. The Delenn, G'Kar, and Sheridan dolls are limited to 12,000 pieces each. Lennier is limited to 3000 pieces, and Cole and Vir are each limited to 2000.

A set of dolls based on the movie It's a Wonderful Life is scheduled to be released exclusively to Target stores Oct. 1-10. The series includes figures of George Bailey, Mary Bailey, and Clarence Adabody, as well as various accessories, including a Christmas tree and angel wings. Each doll is limited to 12,000 pieces.

Already available through Target are sets based on Gilligan's Island and Happy Days. Sets based on Dukes of Hazzard and The Honeymooners have been released through Toys 'R' Us. A Samantha doll based on the Bewitched TV series is available exclusively through FAO Schwartz. This 11 1/2" doll carries a higher suggested retail price of up to $55. A set of Three Stooges dolls released through Target has sold out.

Wrightson's zombie returns as a vinyl model kit

Sideshow Inc. says its model kit of Bernie Wrightson's "I'm Back" is the first time a vinyl zombie kit has been marketed. The 1/6-scale model was sculpted by Mat Falls from Wrightson's art and includes a graveyard base and tombstones. Figure painter Tom Gilliland provides painting instructions. The kit is priced at $70 and, if local retailers don't have it, it can be ordered directly from Sideshow, 31364 Via Colinas, Ste. 106, Westlake Village, CA 91362, or by calling (800) 474-3746. Orders to Sideshow should add $7 for postage and handling.

Art by the Hildebrandts and others is displayed and sold at the Spiderwebart Gallery.

Gallery aims at comic art collectors

The Spiderwebart Gallery in Morris Plains, N.J., opened in September. The gallery displays and sells art by such creators as the Hildebrandt Brothers, Joe Quesada, Andy Kubert, Rick Bryant, Jimmy Palmiotti, Nelson DeCastro, Ron Miller, Dave Stevens, Jim Silke, Lou Harrison, Peter Ambush, and Frank Frazetta, including specially commissioned art. Professional comics artist Glenn Herdling acts as creative consultant.

A selection of fantasy, science-fiction, and Western bronzes is also available, as well as limited-edition prints, signed comic books, signed trading cards, signed master prints, and contemporary interpretations of Native American artifacts.

Located in American Enterprise Park at 120 American Rd., the gallery's regular hours are Tuesday through Friday from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday and Saturday hours can be arranged by appointment. The gallery can be reached at (201) 292-6857.

Mid-Ohio-Con: It's friendly

By John Byrne

In what is rapidly approaching 25 years in the comic book biz, I have attended many, many comics cons, both here in the United States and around the world, and, as I am sure you can well imagine, the range of experiences I have had at these different conventions is as wide and varied as the locations of the events themselves.

I have been to cons where I have had a great time — some of the best times of my life, in fact — and I have been to conventions which ranked right up there alongside a life sentence in a dentist's chair. The funny thing is, you have no idea, no warning whatsoever of what it's going to be like at a con before you go. It's really just fingers-crossed-and-hope-for-the-best.

So it was with some small degree of trepidation that I agreed to attend the Second Annual Mid-Ohio-Con back in 1981.

I was living in Western Canada at the time, and Ohio was quite a schlep — especially in November, when Calgary, my old hometown, is usually buried under six feet of snow and even getting to the airport is an adventure. (As it happened, between getting the invitation to the con and actually setting out for Ohio, I moved to Chicago, but that's another story).

Mid-Ohio-Con was very, very small in those days. Roger Price ran it out of the basement of a Holiday Inn (or some such), and, if I took a really deep breath, I was in danger of pushing everyone else in attendance right out of the tiny room.

But Roger had come up with one accidental innovation, placing the guest's table on a riser so we were at eye level with the fans, and right away Mid-Ohio Con won several brownie points with me — it did not send me home with the usual case of "Convention Neck" brought on by sitting behind a table looking up at people all day.

Down through the (too many!) years, Mid-Ohio-Con has grown and grown and grown, until it is now one of the larger cons out there. But, thanks entirely to the efforts of Roger and his wife Jane — who does not have to do this, but does! — Mid-Ohio has remained one of the most pleasant, friendliest cons I attend. In fact for many years it was (and is likely to again become) the only con I attend!

I've only missed one year (since I started going), and that was during the time when I was not doing any conventions, anywhere.

Oh, and there's a couple of things I got out of Mid-Ohio-Con that I never would have expected: two of the best friends I have or am ever likely to have, Roger and Jane Price. Thanks, youse guys!

Mid-Ohio-Con: Professional atmosphere

By Ken Penders

Mid-Ohio-Con '96 is where I resumed making appearances at conventions for the first time in more than two years. By then, I was well established as the writer of Archie's Sonic the Hedgehog as well as its sometime artist. What I wasn't prepared for were the fans and dealers I would meet, displaying great enthusiasm for a series I thought no one was paying attention to.

I've attended many conventions since and can honestly say of those I have attended only three (of which Mid-Ohio was one) have treated creators in a manner that made the experience that much more pleasant and enjoyable.

Mid-Ohio was not only fun, it conveyed a professional atmosphere, as well, making it fan-friendly to the average family who brought their children for a day (or weekend) of enjoyment and hunting for those treasured items to complete their collections.

As the year winds down, I look forward once again to Mid-Ohio-Con, looking to not only promote the work I'm doing for Archie regarding Sonic and Knuckles, but other projects, such as the various Star Trek stories I have in the works — not to mention a series of my own creation. So for the fans who are looking for an autograph, a sneak peek at their favorite hero's adventures or just to talk, I'll be there.

Mid-Ohio-Con: It's charitable

Mid-Ohio-Con's 1997 charity auction to benefit CBLDF

Mid-Ohio-Con was a pioneer among comic-book shows in the development of philanthropic support of worthwhile non-profit organizations. In the last 17 years, Mid-Ohio-Con has raised close to $1 million for such organizations as The March of Dimes, Ronald McDonald Children's Charities, Ronald McDonald House, Public Broadcasting, and the Comic Book Legal Defense Fund.

As Mid-Ohio-Con enters its 18th year, the show is increasing its support of the Comic Book Legal Defense Fund by making it the sole beneficiary of the annual auction of original art and rare collectibles. Given the fragile state of the comics industry from both creative and retail perspectives, Mid-Ohio-Con organizer Roger Price said he could think of no better way to "give back" to those who have given so much, than by helping the CBLDF to protect First Amendment rights.

On Saturday evening at 7 p.m., all Mid-Ohio-Con attendees, guests, and exhibitors are invited to attend the auction in the third floor auditorium of the Adam's Mark Hotel. Many of the show's guests and exhibitors will contribute items to the auction, and all funds raised will directly benefit CBLDF.

In addition to this support, Mid-Ohio-Con said it is pleased to provide CBLDF with a prominent exhibit space to better showcase this fine organization and the work it does. All profits from the sale of Mid-Ohio-Con souvenir T-shirts will also benefit the Comic Book Legal Defense Fund.

More information about the Comic Book Legal Defense Fund is available from (800) 99-CBLDF.

Mid-Ohio-Con: It's a benchmark

Mid-Ohio-Con is the only convention, besides San Diego, that Sirius has never missed. I have often cited Roger Price's work to would-be promoters as a benchmark for creating an enjoyable and professional comics convention. The Columbus, Ohio, location makes it very convenient for almost all of our fans in the Midwest, and there are always new and interesting guests at the show.

Attendance is consistent, and the variety in the dealer's room always leaves me broke!

Mid-Ohio-Con attracts new guests ... ... and old ones

This year's show has attracted guests old and new. At press time, Mid-Ohio-Con's scheduled guests who would appear at the event for the first time included:

Kevin J. Anderson, Murphy Anderson, Kurt Busiek, Leonard Kirk, Rebecca Moesta, Terry Moore, Mart Nodell, Phil Nutman, David Quinn, and Paul Smith.

Mid-Ohio-Con's featured guests will be available to meet their fans and sign autographs at various times during the show.

Appearances may be subject to change.

Mid-Ohio-Con: The way cons used to be

I attended Mid-Ohio-Con for the first time last year. I loved it. It reminded me of the way cons used to be when pros and fans could mingle and talk and have a good time together. Columbus also surprised me. It's a great town to visit — with wonderful restaurants and a nice atmosphere. I can't recommend this con strongly enough. Hope to see you there.

September shipping update

These are comics scheduled to ship during the month of September that, to the best of our knowledge, have not yet had specific release dates announced. Titles that have been crossed out indicate that we have received confirmation from a publisher or distributor that that title has shipped and should be available in stores now. This update covers shipping information received through Sept. 26.

SUPER TRADERS

Super Trader ads are available for $108.00 each. Super Traders are designed by the advertiser on 8-1/2" x 8-1/2" paper. We reduce the ad to 5" x 5" size. Super Trader ads are a low cost form of advertising. Because of this, CBG does not typeset, screen photos, add logos, artwork or credit card symbols to Super Trader ads.

We're selling our warehouse and must move over 250,000 comics from the last 15 years!!!
All Books are NM-MINT!!!
Satisfaction guaranteed!!!

THIS IS OUR CATALOG:

RULES:

- Choose any comics from the below list OR from the last 15 years with an OVERSTREET price of $5.00 or less. (We even have ALF and Rocket Raccoon.)
- LIST EQUAL # OF ALTERNATIVES. PLEASE LIST COMICS IN ALPHA/NUMERIC ORDER JUST LIKE OVERSTREET. (Have you ever tried to fill an order from 1,000 comic boxes??) Don't Cherry Pick! We will NOT sell you 50 copies of X-men #281. We will however be very glad to sell you 1 each of Silver Surfer 2-120 that are $5.00 or lower.
- We reserve the right to limit quantities. POSTAGE: Please add $3.00 + .03 per comicfor shipping.
- Please provide street address as most orders are shipped UPS.
- All major credit cards are accepted. Include expiration date.
- Checks or money orders accepted: Checks take 2 weeks to clear.
- Missouri residents add 6.435% sales tax.

ALWAYS INCLUDE YOUR WANT LIST

We have 5 retail stores with over 1 million comics and probably 2 zillion cards in stock. We also carry used CDs, used video games, Star Wars action figures, game cards, good girl art items, role playing games, anime, and a whole lot more!

WE ARE ALWAYS BUYING COMICS & TRADING CARDS!!! Send your list to us.

We hope you'll visit our other stores.

Features	Hardware requirements for Comic CollectionTracker 1.0
✓ 32-bit performance	CPU: 486 50 required, Pentium recommended
✓ Fast, powerful database query engine	Disk Space Required: 6-8 MB
✓ Print custom reports	Windows 95 / Windows NT 3.5 or better
✓ Context-sensitive Windows Help System	Display: VGA or better monitor

Keep the typing to a minimum - choose title, publisher, comic type (REG, ANN, GSZ, etc.), condition, writer & artist from pick lists that you can modify! Keep track of Overstreet Numerical Equivalent (ONE) scores, purchase price, price guide value, writer, artist & even notes. Adding a run of comics to CollectionTracker is simple & painless. After a new comic is added from the New Comic window, all information carries to the next new comic, except for the issue number, which is increased by 1. Changes are easy too! CollectionTracker allows you to modify a range of comics simply by choosing the range and the information (such as price or guide value) to be changed. Perfect for updating the guide value of your comics!

TRADERS

Trader ads are available for $40.00 each. Traders are designed by the advertiser on 8-1/2" x 8-1/2" paper. We reduce the ad to 3-1/4" x 3-1/4" size. Trader ads are a low cost form of advertising. Because of this, CBG does not typeset, screen photos, add logos, artwork or credit card symbols to Trader ads.

The advertisers' index is provided as a reader service. Occasional last minute changes may result in ads appearing on pages other than those listed here. The publisher assumes no liability for omissions or errors.

GENERAL INFORMATION

A. PAYMENT: Ads must be accompanied by payment. You may pay with a check, money order, or credit card.

B. CREDIT CARDS: We will accept the following credit cards: VISA, MasterCard, American Express, Discover.

C. DEADLINE: For all advertising is 4:00 p.m. each Tuesday, unless otherwise stated on deadline card.

D. TERMS: Cash with copy only. All advertisers must provide information for the confidential use of the publisher should questions arise.

E. CONTRACT RATES are available for 6, 13, 26, or 52 consecutive issues. Contract rates apply to fulfillment of contract items. Cancellation of a contract by the advertiser allows the publisher to reinvoice covered ads at the earned rate. This rate card is a part of the advertising contract.

F. MINORS are required to furnish a statement of responsibility from their parent or guardian before their advertising can be accepted.

G. ERRORS: Typewritten copy is recommended. The publisher is not responsible for errors resulting from long-hand or illegible copy, or changes submitted by telephone. The publisher's liability for any error shall not exceed the cost of the space occupied by that error.

H. LAYOUT and design services are provided by Krause Publications for advertisers who do not submit camera-ready copy. Due to the creative and subjective nature of these services, credit will not be allowed for conceptual variations.

I. GRADING: Items offered in any ad must be properly described as to condition, conforming to the standards set forth in Comics Buyer's Guide Price Guide. Advertisers may also exercise the option of grading offerings by applying a unique personal system, providing the standards applied are detailed in the ad to avoid confusion.

J. RETURN PRIVILEGE: Except as otherwise specified in any ad, an advertiser must accept the return of any merchandise postmarked within ten working days of its receipt by a customer.

K. P.O. BOX ADS are allowed, but the permanent home address, phone number and place of business of the advertiser must be filed with the publisher before advertisements may be printed.

L. SPECIAL PAGE POSITIONS are available at a premium, inquire for details.

M. ADVERTISING AGENCIES: There are no agency discounts.

N. CAMERA READY display ads qualify for a 15% discount. Copy must be ready for camera without additional paste-up or film work required. No charge for reproductions, enlargements or mail response key change. Classified Display, Comics Trader, Collector's Showcase and classified word ads do not qualify for the camera ready discount.

O. SPACE RESERVATIONS available for camera ready ads only. Must be made prior to ad deadline. Reserved space must be paid for even if ad does not arrive on time.

P. PRE-PRINTED INSERTS are available in Comics Buyer's Guide. Inquire for additional information and technical specifications.

Q. CIRCULATION is throughout the United States and Canada by subscription and single copy sales by agents in shops and other outlets.

R. PROOF OF PUBLICATION: Tear sheets of new display ads are mailed to those advertisers requesting this service. We regret we cannot provide this service to classified advertisers.

S. NOTE: All advertising orders are accepted subject to the terms and provisions of the current rate card. Krause Publications, Inc. reserves the right to decline advertising or suspend advertising privileges for such periods of time as in its discretion it sees fit, for any reason, whatsoever, irrespective of the validity of the reasons for such declination or suspension. The forwarding of an order is construed as acceptance of all rates and conditions in effect at the time the advertising is submitted. The publisher will not be bound by any conditions, printed or otherwise, appearing on any order for advertising space, billing instructions or copy instructions which conflict with its policies. Advertisers and advertising agencies assume liability for all content (including text representation and illustrations) of advertisements printed, and also assumes responsibility of any claims arising therefrom made against the publisher. It is the advertiser's or agency's responsibility to obtain appropriate releases on any item or individual pictured in their advertising. All agreements are subject to strikes, accidents, acts of God, or other contingencies beyond the publisher's control. CLASSIFIED WORD ADS:

Our "Classified" ads are heavily read. Base rates are 35¢ per word with discounts for multiple issues. Please print and punctuate - we are not responsible for error due to long-hand and illegible copy. For more information see classified ad form in the classified section. Credit card customers can place word ads TOLL FREE - Call 1-800-942-0673. (This is for classified word ads only.)

UNIT ADVERTISING:

A. COLLECTORS SHOWCASE

Collectors Showcase Units are 3-1/4" wide x 1-5/8" high and can be bought in multiples. All typesetting is done by Krause Publications and is included in the price.

Cost per ad per issue: ads must run consecutively to earn contract discounts

1 Issue	6 Issues	13 Issues	26 Issues	52 Issues
$29.00	$28.00	$27.00	$26.00	$24.00

B. COMICS TRADER ADS

"No-frills" advertising with a price to match. Design your own ad - just type your ad clearly on an 8-1/2"w x 8-1/2"h sheet of paper. We will reduce your Trader ad to fit a 1/9 page space (3-1/4"w x 3-1/4"h). Super Traders should be typed on an 8-1/2"w x 8-1/2"h sheet of paper which will be reduced to fit a 5" x 5" space.

Regular Trader

(Cost per ad per issue: ads must run consecutively to earn contract discounts. Limit 6 Trader spaces per page per advertiser.)

1 Issue	6 Issues	13 Issues	26 Issues	52 Issues
$40.00	$39.00	$38.00	$36.00	$33.00

$108.00	$106.00	$104.00	$99.00	$90.00

C. COMICS STRIPS

Comics Strip ads are 10" w x 2⅝" h and are reserved for publishers promoting their comics titles.

1 Issue	4 Issues
$85.00	$300.00

D. RETAILER DIRECTORY ..... $3.50 per issue

Leads fans to your cash register! List your store name, address, phone number and 15 words of description. Sold in 26 and 52 week increments. It's targeted more to the comics buff than the yellow pages - and it's more cost effective. If you sell COMICS BUYER'S GUIDE in your store, we will publish your listing in bold face type at no extra charge.

ADVERTISING REQUIREMENTS

A completed reference form must be in our confidential files before any buy, sell or trade ad can be placed. See below. Minors are required to furnish a statement of responsibility from their parents or guardian before their advertising can be accepted.

Payment must accompany an advertisement and must be in the form of a personal check drawn on U.S., Canadian or Mexican bank; money orders; international money orders; cashier's checks; or with your VISA, MasterCard, American Express or Discover credit card. Send your credit card number, expiration date, and the name on the card, along with permission to charge the card for your ad, with your advertising copy.

BUT I DIGRESS...

by PETER DAVID

One never knows.

With all the topics I write about, all the opinions I toss around — what column of mine drew the single greatest number of comments? The one where I took the liberty of lettering Rob Liefeld's first issue of Captain America, making use of the special preview which Rob had graciously supplied.

Well, since Rob was kind enough to provide a similar preview of Fighting American at the Chicago con this year, I decided to take another stab at it. I hope it will meet with the same degree of amusement afforded by my previous endeavors.

So I present: Fighting Digression.
